My, What Headlines!
The Red Carmens
Man With Finger Missing
Laconic Englishman

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

Mixed up Europe offers so many kinds of news that Bill Curley himself would hardly know what to put on the front page, in biggest type.

Barcelona Fascists, planning to overthrow Spain's existing "Red" government, discovered that their main problem was to escape alive from Barcelona. Some crawled through sewers to the city's outskirts. Others persuaded kind-hearted keepers of the insane asylum, for a consideration to lock them up in cells for violent maniacs; there they shook their bars, made grimaces: who could suspect them? What a headline there!

Real photographs show rows of Spanish girls, rifles on their shoulders and cartridge belts, where a camellia should be, marching out to shoot Spanish "Rebels," enemies of the "Red" government. Some newspaper man, with genius worthy of New York's Walter Howey, or Jack Lait, has named them "Red Carmens." There for you is a headline:

"RED CARMENS THAT WOULD ALL ANDALUSIA INCARNADINE."

It is no Flo Ziegfeld row of Red Carmens; these young female fighters are brought back, with bullets through them, to die in hospitals.

Englishmen are sometimes laconic. A popular young yachtsman, known all over England, living at the time at the house of a widow, first name Fay, wrote to his brother, before he killed himself:

"I have only two speeds. Let no one blame Fay, she has nothing to do with this."

That was all.

The brother said the message was plain, the dead man was thorough, lived, spent and gave freely; his "two speeds" were "full speed ahead" and STOP. When the time came, he STOPPED. His dying message about "Fay" reminds you of the dying English monarch's "don't let poor Nelly starve." only "Fay" is a rich widow.

Spaniards fight savagely, on both sides of their civil war, with an indifference to death rare outside of Asia. In the Loyola barracks, 750 Fascist insurgents, having long held out against the "Red" government, surrendered.

The commanding officer, Captain Fernandez, who had been "responsible for sending scores of people to firing parties" in a previous revolt, seeing that surrender was inevitable, drew his revolver and began shooting his own men. One was killed, several badly wounded, before his own officers shot him dead.

In the Asturias, a company of miners, fighting for the "Red" government against Insurgent Fascists, were overcome. Their leader, summoned to discuss terms of surrender with Fascist officers, spoke politely, casually put his lighted cigarette into his pocket and blew himself and three of the anti-Red officers into a better world.

The miner, who had put high explosives in that pocket before going to "discuss terms," had the last word; his death shows what sort of civil war it is.

That miner's determination was equalled, even excelled, in the days of the Czars, long before Lenin or Stalin, by an imprisoned Nihilist, who feared that torture might make him betray his associates. A small oil lamp burned high on the wall of his cell; grasping the iron bars of his cell window, he drew himself up until his left side was exposed to the flame, and hung there, burning, until unconscious.

He was dead when the jailer came to question him.

Rough and ready plain crime, American style, abounds, with innumerable fancy trimmings.

A French mother-in-law and her coiffeur husband worked and skimped to give their son an education that enabled him to become an officer in the army. He "upped" and married a pretty girl with no dowry, not a cent.

American mothers cannot know what that means to a hard-working self-sacrificing French mother. The young wife had one young baby, expected another, when the mother-in-law called, broke her head open with a bottle, hanged her to a closet hook with a shoe lace.

The young husband officer "threw himself sobbing on the corpse," the mother-in-law said only:

"I did not choose her for him."

Parents in France have much to say about their in-laws. Until lately they could forbid and prevent a marriage not approved of, unless their child could convince the judge that the parents were utterly unreasonable. The thing that America calls "a gin wedding" has not reached here.

Then there is L'Assassin Au

Mary Astor's Diary:

'I Fell for George Like Ton o' Brick'

MARY ASTOR

Her Diary Bares Romance

Los Angeles, Aug. 10 (INS)—In lavender ink, Mary Astor wrote in a diary love secrets and bared details of a romantic interlude she experienced with George S. Kaufman, Pulitzer prize-winning playwright.

Today, Joseph Anderson, attorney for her former husband, Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, in the court battle over the custody of their daughter, Marilyn, released excerpts from the "lavender diary."

They follow as printed today by the Los Angeles Herald-Express:

TUESDAY, JAN. 14, 1934.

Well, here it is another New Year and I'm doing my usual wondering about what's going to happen to me.

To go back to my May entry, I flew east with the Gallaghers, stayed about two weeks and had a heavenly time—and I did meet a man, professional, somewhat older and rather well-to-do only his first initial is G—George Kaufman—and I fell like a ton of bricks—as only I can fall—it was just one of those things—I met him the Friday after I arrived, at the Algonquin.

A friend had told me to look him up and I had phoned

MARY ASTOR IS ON STAND; TO ARREST KAUFMAN

BULLETIN

Los Angeles, Aug. 10 (AP)—Mary Astor took the witness stand for cross-examination today in her marital dispute with Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, and immediately a flurry of objections interrupted the questioning.

Before the auburn-haired actress was called, Superior Judge Goodwin J. Knight ordered a bench warrant to be issued for George S. Kaufman, Broadway dramatist, who is under subpoena to testify in the case.

Kaufman was not in court.

Los Angeles, Aug. 10—Eight pages of glamorous Mary Astor's "charm rating" diary, in which she wrote of her love for George S. Kaufman, famous New York playwright, will go into evidence shortly after the spectacular child custody case is resumed today.

Superior Judge Goodwin J. Knight, who has read the lurid portion, told International News Service this morning he believes it relevant as tending to reveal the fitness of Miss Astor to have custody of her four-year-old daughter, Marilyn.

"All portions of the diary that are relevant will be admitted into evidence," said Judge Knight, "unless counsel can cite authorities which would prohibit their introduction. I know of no such

Hitler Sends 2 Warships To Spain

BULLETIN

Berlin, Aug. 10 (INS)—Obviously concerned over Madrid's failure to answer two sharp protests over the killing of seven Germans in Spain, the Reich today dispatched two more torpedo boats to Spanish waters.

London, Aug. 10 (AP)—The British government today forwarded a protest to Spanish belligerents in connection with the death of a British subject, Captain Rupert Savile, reported slain by insurgent gunfire on a yacht in Gijon harbor.

The British foreign office said it was advised the shell which took Savile's life and wounded his wife was fired by the Almirante Cervera, rebel cruiser.

The protest was wirelessed by Ambassador Henry G. Chilton to a British destroyer for relay to the Spanish vessel.

Pending instructions from London, said the message, the British government reserved the right "to obtain compensation."

The rebel cruiser Almirante Cervera fired in the dim light only 600 feet off as the Savile yacht was caught between the cruiser and government shore batteries. Struck amidship, the yacht was reported to be sinking.

The British torpedo boat Comet took Capt. Savile's body and Mrs. Savile to St. Jean De Luz. Today Mrs. Savile said she would take the body to the United States for burial.

LYNN MOTHER MEETS SHIP IN VAIN AT NEW YORK

Twenty-year-old Jane Carey of Lynn, a Smith College senior, was reported strangely missing from her cabin aboard the liner Queen Mary when the giant ship docked in New York at noon today.

Announcement of the disappearance came in a terse statement from officials of the Cunard White Star line. It read:

"Miss Jane Carey, 20, of 243 Ocean street, Lynn, was reported missing from the ship when it docked. A search about the boat for her Proved fruitless. Presumed lost at sea."

A strange feature of the disappearance was the statement of close personal friends to the effect the girl could not be missing from the Queen Mary because she is a passenger aboard the steamer Statendam, due in Boston, on Thursday.

LANDON INVOKES SPIRIT OF PIONEERS FOR U.S. FUTURE

CITES LINCOLN'S VISION IN CENTENNIAL MESSAGE

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 10 (INS)—With the courage and spirit of the pioneers who tamed the West, the American people can conquer every modern problem and progress to an "even greater future," Governor Alfred M. Landon declared today in a message of greetings to the Centennial celebration at Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Landon recalled how the pioneers linked the West to the East by railroads and paid tribute to Abraham Lincoln, who dedicated the terminus of the Union Pacific road in Council Bluffs.

To Mr. John Leroy Peterson,
President Centennial Celebration, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

"My greetings to historic Council Bluffs. They were splendid and indomitable men who first stood on your hills and looked out across the muddy waters of the great Missouri River. In their vision they saw America in the making.

"In their hearts and their courage was the spirit that peopled the prairies, subdued the land to the plow and built the great and prosperous empire of the Middle West. Behind them, though they did not know it then, was to be built the great state of Iowa before them, across the river, were the raw prairies out of which a great people were to build yet another state, Nebraska.

"America and the spirit of America not only settled the wilderness, they tamed it and brought forth from the riches of the creator a bounty and a prosperity never dreamed of. Aand they did this thing in only a little more than half a century.

Lincoln's Vision

"Thus it was possible for the great Lincoln to visit Council Bluffs only twenty-three years later and from your hills, where the pioneers had stood, look out over the splendid panorama of the Missouri River valley and envision the needs that would unite forever the East and the West. And then in four years because Abraham Lincoln had stood on your hills and knew the land.

"Congress, on his urgings, officially named Council Bluffs as the eastern terminus of the Union Pacific, the great railroad that was to reach out across the prairies and the mountains and tie the Golden West to the Union. It was a splendid day in December, 1863, when the first shovel turned the dirt for that great enterprise.

Ours to Do Anew

"How splendid and fitting it is that the Council Bluffs chapter of the D. A. R. has enshrined the memory of Lincoln in the monument that stands where he stood on your hills, looking out toward the west. How fitting that there should be inscribed on that monument, 'King of men, whose crown was love, whose throne was gentleness.' The great railroad and the West forever a part of the Union is the monument to his statesmanship. All these things you celebrate today and yet more. You celebrate the future of America as well as its past.

"If America could tame the wilderness, shall we cry quits because in these modern days there are problems to face?

"Ours is to dedicate ourselves anew to the great future of America. The Creator has given us unbounded resources. With a population only 6 per cent of the population of the world, we have created here one-third of the wealth of the world.

"Let the challenge go forth from your celebration:

"America here todays renews its vision and from the vantage point of all that it has achieved looks forward to the courage and the spirit of the men and women who wrought this achievement to an even greater future."

"ALFRED M. LANDON."

NEW PROBE IN 2 GIRLS' DEATHS

Worcester, Aug. 10—In a surprise move today, Police Chief Joseph J. Condon of Shrewsbury ordered a complete investigation into the drownings of Miss Catherine Kelley of Euclid street and Miss Anna Cooney of Montrose street.

Miss Kelley, a teacher in a junior high school, and Miss Cooney, owner of a beauty parlor, went to their deaths in Lake Quinsigamond early Sunday morning following a Saturday night party in a camp at the lake.

In announcing he had ordered an investigation Chief Condon disclosed that he had received information that an unidentified man may have fled the scene at the time of the double tragedy.

Chief Condon revealed he planned to question a dozen persons including those who had accompanied the two girls on the boat trip that was to have ended on an island half way across the lake where the group planned to swim.

The three who were with them were Mrs. Monica Quinn, wife of a Worcester police officer; Thomas F. McManus of Pleasant street, Worcester and Harold O'Connor of Rodmont street.

Commenting on his surprise investigation order Chief Condon said:

"I have received information that instead of five persons being in the party at the time the girls were drowned there were actually six. The sixth person I have been informed was a man.

"I am anxious to determine whether this is true and if I find another man was there I want to question him."

Davis also announced that Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota, and Thomas C. O'Brien, of Boston, candidates respectively for President and Vice President of the Union party ticket, would address the convention at a general mass meeting in Cleveland Stadium Sunday.

FUGITIVE 'HOUDINI'

Suspect Says He Was Chapman Pal

Richard F. Dodge, 31, of Lawrence, who has a record of 40 arrests and 18 years served in various institutions, and who "bragged" to police he escaped from the Atlanta penitentiary with the late Gerald Chapman, was arrested today by Patrolman James L. Rowe of the Back Bay station.

Dodge's record showed that he had proved a veritable "Houdini" when it came to escaping from various county jails and state prisons.

He was arrested by Patrolman Rowe, who saw him lift a brief case from a parked car in Providence street and walk away. The officer gave chase and collared Dodge.

In the lineup at police headquarters Dodge, assuming an air of braggadocio after his identity was revealed, stated:

"I'm the guy that pulled the escape with Gerald Chapman from the Atlanta pen back in 1923."

Dodge then pulled up his shirt and showed the officers two scars, one on his left shoulder and one just below the heart, which he claimed he suffered while running a hail of gunfire during the daring escape.

Although police are not sure that Dodge was a companion of the notorious Chapman during the escape, they admit his records show he has escaped from some six prisons and jails in 10 years.

Arraigned before Judge A. K. Cohen in municipal court, Dodge, still swaggering, was held without bail.

As they took him to the lockup the prisoner said archly:

"Well the clink won't look so bad after all—at least a guy'll get three squares a day."

mother of the girl, was in New York meeting the Queen Mary.

These informants said they thought Mrs. Carey was meeting "a friend" on the Queen Mary.

They insisted she was not aware of it if her daughter had taken passage on the ship.

They said Mrs. Carey had made arrangements to meet her "friend" in New York, spend two days in that city and then hurry to Boston to meet her daughter, whom she expected would land on the Statendam at East Boston Thursday.

FEARED LOST AT SEA

Stewards on the Queen Mary discovered yesterday morning that the young woman who boarded the vessel at Southampton, Eng., was missing from her tourist class cabin.

After a thorough search of the ship had been made, the line then announced that Miss Carey was "presumed lost at sea."

No notes were found in Miss Carey's stateroom, and there were no indications that she had planned suicide.

The Carey family came and settled in Lynn's exclusive "gold coast" section in 1928 following the death of the late John W. Carey, former Chicago lumber king and banker.

Her father was once president of the Carey, Lombard and Young Lumber Co., of Chicago, one of the largest in the middle west. Her grandfather and other ancestors were numbered among the wealthiest residents of Chicago.

Miss Carey left Lynn a year ago to study with a group of Smith College students in Florence, Italy, as part of her general college course at Smith College in Northampton.

Friends, both in Lynn and at Smith College, were unable to supply a reason for the girls' disappearance.

Dwight Coupe, "The assassin with the finger cut off." Ordinarily he would attract little attention, with his face as brutal as the murders of which he is accused. But the "finger cut off," what does that mean? It reminds you of Victor Hugo's L'Homme Qui Rit, "The Man Who Laughs," or "The Murders of the Rue Morgue," or something.

HOW did he lose that finger? Did some former victim of this monstre bite off the finger, in her dying agony? Could the finger bone, even now, be found in her stomach, if she were dug up? Would it be found to fit the remaining stump?

When Dorothy Dix was the best girl reporter in the world, before becoming a leading philosopher, she could unravel faint clues, but French reporters in possession of a finger cut off would surprise her.

The question "will the guillotine blade do for the murderer's head what the teeth of the fair victim may have done for the finger?" interests many. Hastings and Keats Speed, who invented the "Lamp Black Swamp Mystery" title for the story about the lady found murdered, all undressed, on the black mud between Jersey City and Newark, N. J., can tell how much a good headline means.

Ike White, sleuth-reporter, working for the late Joseph Pulitzer, found and convicted the murderer in the "Lamp Black Swamp" case, but Hastings and Speed got the extra circulation, about 75,000, for the Evening Journal.

Today's Boon-Doggle

According to all the usual indices of business activity, Pueblo—the second largest city in Colorado—is anything but an impoverished community that must rely upon the generosity of the Federal government.

Its automobile registrations average better than one car to a family, and there are three automobiles in service for every two telephones.

Its bank deposits are considerably in excess of the bank deposits in New Rochelle, N. Y., for example, although New Rochelle has a larger population than Pueblo.

Its per capita retail sales exceed those in the Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens or Staten Island.

At the time of the last census 40 per cent of its population was gainfully employed, so that in this respect, too, it outranked New York city.

Pueblo, in short, could afford to bear a substantial portion of the cost of relief work within its border.

But when President Roosevelt, on August 20 last, approved the first batch of projects for this city, he pledged the Federal Treasury to an expenditure of $98,738, while the sponsors of these projects agreed to supply only $3,712. Thus for every $36 that Pueblo contributed, the Federal government had to send $964 on these projects.

Under this arrangement, the number of persons on work relief has increased 28 per cent in five months of WPA activity, in spite of the fact that business in this community is vastly improved over last year.

LABOR SUPPORT PRAISED BY ROOSEVELT

Washington, Aug. 10 (AP)—President Roosevelt told labor's Non-Partisan League today he was confident future history would show as it had in the past, that "a return to reactionary practices is ever short-lived."

In a letter George L. Berry, president of the league, read at the league's first national convention, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"My dear Major Berry:

"It gives me real pleasure to extend a word of greeting through you to labor's non-partisan league upon the occasion of the meeting of its state chairmen in Washington.

"I am certain that you and your associates are coming to Washington to join in a thorough consideration of the vital issues of the time and to consider how best to cooperate in the great task of promoting national progress and of enlarging the sphere of human rights through democracy of opportunity.

"PROUD OF LABOR SUPPORT"

"It is fully realized by all of us that you are gathering to support a political cause, but that merely makes it the more certain that you are determined to enlarge the scope of human welfare in our nation.

"I should like to have you know that I am sincerely proud that you are gathering in support of my candidacy. This could not be the case if you did not know, out of the experience of the past three years, that the present administration has endeavored to promote the ideal of justice for the great masses of America's wage earners and to make that ideal a reality.

"We all know that our country has been going through profound changes and that these changes have necessitated special reconsideration of the problems of the wage earners and the farmers. Automatic machinery, the device of corporate ownership and management, the monumental accumulations of capital—these are some of the factors that have made it necessary for our country and its government to look at men and measures from a new point of view, seeking new means for the restoration of equality of opportunity.

HISTORY TO REPEAT

"During the past three years we have endeavored to correct through legislation certain of the evils in our economic system. We have sought to put a stop to certain economic practices which did not promote the general welfare.

"Some of the laws which were enacted were declared invalid by the Supreme Court. It is a notable fact that it was not the wage earners who cheered when those laws were declared invalid. I greet you in the faith that future history will show, as past history has so repeatedly and so effectively shown, that a return to reactionary practices is ever short-lived. Having tasted the benefits of liberation, men and women do not for long forego those benefits.

"I have implicit faith that we shall find our way to progress through law. Your support is a priceless contribution toward continued faith in that outcome.

COMMON HERITAGE

"What is of vast importance at this critical time is the fact that we have a common heritage of principle and that we are bound, with millions of our fellow Americans, in a common determination to preserve human freedom and enlarge its sphere and to prevent forever a return to that despotism which comes from unlicensed power to control and manipulate the resources of our nation, and the destiny of human lives.

"In extending to all who attend your meeting my hearty felicitations I am heartened by the conviction that we are all working for the same ideal—the restoration and preservation of human liberty and human rights."

Slight dents in Republican leads were made by Democratic candidates for United States senator and for governor during the 27th day of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser straw ballot.

The dents were inflicted in Everett, whose voters balloted 43 for Governor Curley, Democratic candidate for the Senate, as against 29 for his Republican rival, Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., and 43 for State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, Democratic aspirant to the governorship, as against 29 for John W. Haigis, the Republican.

But the Republican candidates still have long leads, and the standing now is:

For United States Senator:

Lodge	5734
Curley	3380

For Governor:

Haigis	5814
Hurley	3451

Today the straw ballot car will be in Whitman, Avon and Randolph sounding out sentiment among residents of those towns.

MAINE

Maine's Republican candidates for United States Senator and Governor continued to forge well ahead of their Democratic opponents in the 27th day of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser straw ballot.

Two towns, Yarmouth and Little River, gave Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., Republican senatorial candidate, substantial margins over his Democratic opponent, Governor Louis J. Brann, and favored Lewis O. Barrows, Republican, for governor, over F. Harold Dubord.

Standings in the Maine straw voting at the conclusion of the 27th day of balloting, and with mail votes included, show:

For United States Senator:

White	4376
Brann	3046

For Governor:

Barrows	5174
Dubord	2347

In Yarmouth White received 47 votes and 26 went to Brann, while Barrows received 54 as compared to 19 for Dubord. Little River gave 67 votes to White, 28 to Brann, 83 to Barrows, and 12 to Dubord.

Search Halted For Missing Wife

Gilead, Me., Aug. 10—The two-week search for Mrs. Sarah W. Staples, 63, wife of an Auburn police captain, was at a standstill today following a mystery move on the part of the authorities here. The only explanation for calling off the hunt given by County Attorney Walter Abbott and Sheriff William O. Frothingham was:

"We are going to hold the matter in abeyance for a couple of days before taking our next step."

The dragging of the river was stopped and the men searching the woods were told to go home.

HINT MAYOR TO QUIT RACE

Indications that he would withdraw from the Democratic Senate fight and devote his full time to his city of Boston duties was given by Mayor Mansfield, on the high seas bound for this country after a month's visit in Europe.

The mayor explained he would permit filing of his nomination papers with the secretary of state tomorrow, which would give him seven days to make formal withdrawal before the expiration of the time limit, August 18.

He said he wished to wait until he returned to Boston and talked matters over with friends before officially announcing his withdrawal from the contest.

Friends of the mayor here are expected to urge him to finish out his term at City Hall, which still has one year and five months to run.

HOUSING JOB SPEEDED

U. S. Resumes South Boston Work

The long-desolate site of the federal housing project off Old Colony avenue, South Boston, was a hive of activity today.

Truckload after truckload of lumber rumbled to the big lot which until recently was untidy and uncared for with wrecks of abandoned automobiles littering its weed grown expanse.

On the job of erecting 27 model apartment houses and laying out recreation parks and landscaped gardens were more than 500 carpenters and laborers.

Federal funds, just now made available, enabled Contractor Matthew Cummings to get his construction gangs into action today. The Cummings' contract calls for expenditure of $4,979,670.

Cellars and foundations for the two and three-story dwellings of the model village were completed several months ago.

Today, silhouetted against the blue water of adjacent Dorchester bay, were the rising skeletons of house frames, springing up rapidly.

It is expected that the working force on the job today, will be increased until a total of between 800 and 900 men are employed.

him Monday—he was out of town but he phoned me Friday a. m. and made a luncheon engagement for Saturday with me—the same day I had lunch with Natalie Lewy and in he came—he seemed very nice, talked to us a few minutes, made some remark about the fact that it was lucky we had met so he would know me on the morrow and wouldn't have to wear a red carnation or something. That evening I had dinner with a young man, I've forgotten his name—at "Twenty-one" and there he was again.

GAY WITH GEORGE KAUFMAN

Saturday he called for me at the Ambassador and we went to the Casino for lunch and had a very gay time. He was such fun—we drove back down town and sneaked in at the Music Box where his show, "Of Thee I Sing," was playing, stayed a minute and then went next door (Shubert Theater) where "Gay Divorcee" was showing and it was very cool and pleasant and Fred Astaire was dancing so beautifully to such a beautiful number, "Night and Day," and the theater was half empty, so we stayed, and he was looking at me more than at the stage, and I liked it.

Sunday night we had dinner and saw "International House" at the Paramount and laughed a lot and liked each other even more. Monday I had a preview engagement with Bennett Cerf for dinner but George called me up and said he knew about a tea party that might be fun and would I go—I would and did but the tea party wasn't fun and we left in about 15 minutes. It was very hot so we got a cab and drove around the park a few times and the park was—well, the park—and he held my hands and said he'd like to kiss me, but didn't . . .

Tuesday night we had dinner at "Twenty-One" and on the way to see "Run, Little Chillun," he did kiss me—and I don't think either of us remembered much about what the show was about—afterwards we had a drink some place and then went to a little flat in Seventy-Third street where we could be alone and it was all very thrilling and beautiful.

LINDY'S FLIGHT STOPPED BY PACT

Copenhagen, Aug. 10 (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, angered by the presence of photographers, nearly bolted the opening session of a scientific congress today at which he later was to demonstrate his mechanical heart.

He agreed to remain, however, after Dr. Hans Fischer, head of the Danish Biological Institute, obtained an agreement from the photographers to confine their pictures to group shots.

Doctor Fischer, president, called the International Congress of Experimental Cytology to order with 300 scientists present in the common hall of the Danish parliament.

After brief addresses by two Nobel science prize winners—Dr. Alexis Carrel of New York and Dr. August Krogh of Copenhagen—the delegates adjourned to meet later for the demonstration of the heart invented by Lindbergh and Dr. Carrel.

New Secrets

The mechanical heart was to be presented to the institute after the demonstration in recognition of the facilities it extended in preparation for the experiment.

Colonel Lindbergh completed final arrangements for the demonstration and moved from the home of Captain Andreas Dam, his host, to the hotel in which Dr. Carrel is staying.

The two discussed final details, but declined to disclose in advance any possible new scientific secrets which their later researches may have produced.

"That's Lindbergh's business," curtly answered Dr. Carrel to inquiries regarding the heart apparatus.

MARY'S VARIED TEN

The "ten best Romeos" listed in the "mislaid" diary, were authoritively revealed today as comprising the following:

Four internationally known film leading men.

Three high-salaried motion picture executives.

Two playwrights.

One public official.

Miss Astor identified the lavender inked set of pages as her written product.

Attorney Joseph Anderson said they contained the statement, "I love George" and that he offered them as evidence to impeach the actress' denial that she loved Kaufman shortly before Dr. Franklyn Thorpe obtained an uncontested divorce from her and custody of Marilyn.

Reminded that he had virtually accepted the diary excerpts as evidence last Monday, before the recess Judge Knight was asked if he had changed his mind and also if it would be contempt of court to quote him.

He said it would not be contempt and that he had not changed his mind.

"My main concern is the welfare of this child," said Judge Knight. "I shall consider evidence bearing on the fitness of either parent to have custody of her."

Meanwhile it was learned another proposition to settle the case out of court had been rejected by the warring parents.

The proposal was that Marilyn stay half of each year with Dr. Thorpe and the balance of the time with her mother.

It was understood to have been suggested in behalf of a group of motion picture producers who have a tremendous financial stake in a group of internationally famous actors reported to be listed among the "best 10" Romeos in the diary.

Meanwhile a rumor was in circulation that Kaufman had flown secretly to New York on advice of his attorney that the subpeona, under which he was ordered to appear as a witness for Dr. Thorpe, was not binding.

"I will seek a bench warrant for Kaufman's arrest for contempt of court if he fails to appear in court this morning," said Anderson.

DIONNE And Croll MAKE UP

QUINS' PAPA BANS GASOLINE

Callander, Ont., Aug. 10 (INS)—Oliva Dionne, father of the quintuplets, has buried the hatchet with the Hon. David A. Croll, sponsor of the guardianship bill which made the famous Dionne babies wards of the crown.

So bitter was Papa Dionne at this piece of legislation that he even refused to allow the guardians to have any of his land for building a playground for his daughters.

But with the quarters rolling in from his new business enterprise—refreshment stand across from the Dionne hospital—Papa Dionne today is looking at the world in a kindlier light.

This was demonstrated yesterday when Croll gingerly approached Dionne's refreshment stand. He had come to argue against the installation of gasoline tanks for a filling station there. Too close to the hospital, was the objection; danger of explosion.

Like Friends

Croll was distinctly wary. He didn't know what his reception would be. But much to his astonishment, he was received by Dionne with a smile and handshake. Finally the diplomat brought up the subject of the tanks.

"What would happen to the babies if there was an explosion?" he said. "We can't take any chances."

Dionne nodded. It was a victory for the government; the first without a long battle of words. The astonished Croll was doing so well he even brought up the painful old subject of the land for a playground. Dionne this time readily agreed to sell the government what land it needed.

Coining Money

People around here are glad to see Dionne in a happier frame of mind.

It is believed the change in his attitude was brought about by the government's quick reply to his request for permission to set up the refreshment stand. He sent in the application without much hope of a favorable answer. He got immediate permission to go into business.

And what a business it has turned out to be! From the start it has been a gold mine. In addition to a landoffice business in refreshments and souvenirs, Dionne has sold his autograph to thousands of visitors.

With the additional land, the government plans to landscape the expanse surrounding the hospital and transform it into a garden.

Palmer, Aug. 10 (AP)—Specialists from New York, Boston and Springfield today were called to Wing Memorial Hospital in an effort to save the life of Mary Guczek, 17, of Springfield, injured in collision of a trailer-truck and two automobiles in Brimfield yesterday.

Dr. Joseph Klar of North Wilbraham attributed to a record breaking motorcycle ride of State Trooper Warren Mallett of Monson barracks the prolongation of the girl's life. Mallett covered 30 mile in 23 minutes to carry serum for the treatment of the girl who suffered a ruptured spleen and other injuries.

Claude Fisher of Buffalo, N. Y., driver of the truck, pleaded not guilty to a charge of dangerous driving before Judge Ernest E. Hobson in district court today and was held in $1000 for hearing August 17.

BLONDE IN THE RAIN

Best for 'Date,' Scientist Says

New York, Aug. 10 (US)—Boys, choose a dark, rainy day for a happy date with a blonde or a redhead.

And, by the same token, date your brunette "best girl" for a "day in the sun."

Outdoor Lotharios who would make conquests among femininity were offered these hints by Dr. Charles F. Pabst, noted New York dermatologist.

Blondes and red heads are heliophobes—sun haters who can't tan—and heliophobes, the scientist explained, "feel blue and depressed on bright, sunny days."

On the other hands, brunettes are heliophiles—sun lovers who can tan. These darker tressed lovelies "are likely to feel extremely gay and happy in bright summer sunlight," Dr. Pabst said.

The skin specialist, whose annual warning against the dangers of overexposure to the blazing summer sun was broadcast under the sponsorship of the Brooklyn Academy of Medicine, made public his new sun-tan decalogue.

The "tan" commandments follow:

1—Acquire a coat of tan, provided you are a heliophobe, by means of short exposures.

2—Do not sleep on the beach in the direct rays of the sun.

3—Don't sit in the sun when the body is wet after bathing.

4—Don't go bareheaded in strong sunlight.

5—Don't read books or play cards in the direct rays of the sun.

6—Don't drink highballs or strong liquor while exposed to the summer sun; alcohol and sunlight do not mix.

7—Don't sprinkle perfume on the skin before exposure to the sun; a severe inflammation of the skin may result.

8—Don't recline in strong sunlight after strenuous exercise.

9—Don't forget that blondes and brunettes react differently to the sun's rays; blondes burn more easily.

10—If your skin will redden, blister and burn, but never tans, you are a heliophobe and should not expose yourself, as every new exposure means a new burn.

Things looked brighter today for Arnold and Margaret Cooper and their two babies as offers of clothing, money and a job poured in on them at the Cambridge City Home.

Communist Army Waits on Border

By STANTON B. LEEDS
Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

Headquarters of Insurgent Army, Pamplona, Spain, Aug. 10 (US)—A Red "foreign legion," composed of Communists from other nations who have banded together to fight on the side of the radical government in Spain's bloody civil war, is expected by insurgent leaders soon to cross the border into Spain from France.

READY FOR REDS

This was revealed today by a high ranking insurgent staff officer who let slip the information that rebel chieftains are taking extraordinary precautions to be ready to meet the expected Communist "Foreign Legion" when it attempts to cross the border.

I was escorted by a rebel staff officer, who acted as my guide, on a tour of a section of the Navarre front, which stretches from above San Sebastian down past Bilboa.

It was obvious that there was an undercurrent of activity in this hilly sector, where oxen were being employed to haul heavy cannon into place in spots where tractors would be useless.

PLANES ON JOB

Overhead 12 rebel planes passed back and forth constantly, patrolling the border between Spain and France.

I asked my officer-guide what all this meant, declaring that none but a major power could possibly hope to cut a line through to Burgos over these rugged hills. He replied:

"Exactly, but we do not intend to permit them to collect sufficient ammunition to arm the Communist 'Foreign Legion,' which we expect shortly to penetrate the Basque country, to force through to Navarre. We must be ready not only to outflank them, but also to cut off their source of supply."

Rebels Ask Vaccine to Check Plague

By THOMAS A. LOAYZA
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Madrid, Aug. 10—Plague was added today to Spain's civil war scourge with serious outbreaks of cholera reported in Spanish Morocco.

The government radio intercepted broadcasts from Melilla, urgently appealing to insurgents in Seville to rush 20 cases of anti-cholera vaccine and a similar consignment of anti-rabies serum by airplane.

CALL OFTEN REPEATED

So great is Melilla's need that the call was repeated 30 times.

While a rebel infantry drive northward from Seville and the loyalist movement against Saragossa continued today, artillery, naval, and aerial bombardments continued to be the chief activity of the opposing forces.

Rebel airplanes fought with the famed loyalist battleship Jaime I and seven other warcraft anchored in Malaga Harbor without damage to either side, after which the Jaime I, Libertad, and Cervantes rained shells on Cadiz—indicating once more that Cadiz remains in rebel hands.

IVIZA BOMBARDED

Twelve government seaplanes and two ships bombarded Iviza, one of the Balearic islands, interrupting the raid long enough for British residents to flee aboard the destroyer Douglas. Government claims that Iviza has now fallen are without confirmation.

Loyalists again opened a terrific bombardment of land forces in the Sierra Guadarrama sector just north of Madrid as a preliminary for an infantry offensive in the mountain passes. Government air pilots said the rebel artillery is replying only infrequently, an indication that rebel ammunition supplies are running low.

Dynamite Ready to Aid Loyalists

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
(Dean of American War Correspondents)
(Copyright, 1936, Universal Service)

Madrid, Aug. 10 (US)—Radical government forces today launched new offensives against insurgents in all sectors of Spain's civil war as 10,000 dynamite-toting miners prepared to blow up the city of Oviedo even though their own families will perish in the disaster.

One of the radical miners' leaders declared his followers are determined to "get" Colonel Aranda, commander of the Oviedo insurgents, "even if we find him among the bodies of our children."

The insurgent radio station at Seville, meanwhile, charged in a broadcast tonight that "the American consul in Barcelona has been the victim of an attack." No details of the alleged attack were given in the broadcast and no news of such an incident had as yet reached Madrid.

After a brief lull radical government artillery again opened fire on the insurgent lines in the Guadarrama mountains north of Madrid in a fierce bombardment heralding another offensive to drive the rebels from the passes leading to the capital.

CLAIM 200 KILLED

The Madrid government claimed 200 insurgents, under Col. Garcia Escamez, have been killed during the past 24 hours in hand-to-hand fighting for control of Alta De Leon Pass, still held by a stubborn rebel force.

Sudden suspension of service on the regular German airline between Madrid and Marseilles, France, created great excitement among refugees harbored in the German embassy here. Many of them were scheduled to fly to Marseilles today in the beginning of the wholesale evacuation of all Germans from Madrid as ordered by Chancellor Hitler.

Suspension of the German air transport service caused a change in plans to take the wife of Colonel Fuqua, military attache of the American Embassy, and the family of American Consul Johnson out of Spain. They were to have flown to Marseilles, but instead will go by rail to Valencia tomorrow night to be taken aboard the American cruiser Quincy.

The French passenger airline to Marseilles has also suspended operations.

Meanwhile, a tragedy for the entire artistic world was revealed when the National Committee for the Preservation of Art Treasures announced that a number of priceless paintings by old masters had disappeared from the ancient palace of the Duke of Alba.

The missing art treasures include Goya's masterpiece, a portrait of the Duke's ancestor, Gayetana, and paintings by Valesquez, Rembrandt, Titian, Rubens and Van Dyke.

The committee's statement declared:

"We prefer not to think that the Duke has taken these paintings out of Spain. The Communist militia, quartered in the palace, cannot at present be held responsible."

The old palace—a Mecca for art lovers and travellers from all parts of the world—has been converted into a headquarters for the Red militia.

With sharp protests over the alleged killings of their nationals received from Chancellor Hitler of Germany and Premier Mussolini of Italy, the Madrid regime, fearing armed intervention, today began attempting to mitigate the menacing international situation surrounding the civil war here.

All radical government warships lying at the international North African port of Tangiers left the harbor on orders from the Madrid ministry of marine.

Germany May Take All Spanish Property

Berlin, Aug. 10 (INS)—German retaliatory measures against Spain for the killing of seven Germans assumed menacing potentialities today as the Reich's attitude hardened hourly in the absence of any reply from Madrid to the two protests already forwarded.

Confiscation of all Spanish property in Germany was hinted as a possibility with "even stronger" measures possible if necessary.

Chancellor Hitler, it was learned, is determined to stand for no dilly-dallying in the crisis. He is prepared to take whatever steps may be needed to wring a satisfactory answer from Spain.

There was considerable surprise and some consternation when Berlin learned the Spanish government expressed regret to Britain over the killing of Captain Rupert Savile, a British subject, aboard his yacht off Gijon before taking any steps to meet the German protests over Reich Nationals.

It was announced meanwhile that 1030 Germans have now been evacuated by plane and train from Madrid and 3100 by train and boat from Barcelona.

In view of the tense situation resulting from the killings, it was regarded here as fortunate that the Olympic games have so far monopolized public interest that indignation over the incident has been kept within reasonable bounds.

DUCE TO SEND SHIPS TO SPAIN

Rome, Aug. 10 (INS)—Demanding idemnity as well as "moral satisfaction" from the Leftist Madrid government for the killing of three Italians in Barcelona and destruction of Italian property, Fascist Rome today prepared quietly to back up her action by strengthening Italian naval units at Tangier, Malaga and Barcomo.

Premier Mussolini was back in Rome today, having cut short his vacation to deal with the Spanish situation. His decision, however, to participate in the French neutrality declaration, provided it bans private as well as government aid to Spain's belligerents, remains unchanged.

"More drastic action" may be taken after indemnities are formally demanded, it was stated authoritatively.

It was made clear Italy would deal with the killings independently of any neutrality action taken in conjunction with France and other powers.

New U. S. Warning Urges Americans to Quit Spain

Washington, Aug. 10 (US)—A new warning to Americans to leave the beleaguered city of Madrid has been issued, the State Department was advised by Eric C. Wendelin, in charge of the embassy at the Spanish capital. The warning followed threats of an insurgent air raid.

Wendelin said a curfew had been declared in Madrid by the government and that after 11 p. m. all lights must be extinguished Street cars are banned and only government cars are permitted on the streets, he added. Subway stations are kept open as bomb shelters.

The State Department was advised bombardment of the embassy was not expected in the event of an air attack.

Meanwhile the U. S. S. Quincy was steaming to Palma, where an "acute situation" was reported developing. The cruiser will return to Valencia to evacuate refugees from Madrid, dispatches said.

Warned of the threatened air raid, 12 Americans were reported to have left Madrid for Valencia where they boarded a British cruiser. The family of John D. Johnson, American consul at Madrid, were reported fleeing to Marseilles by plane.

While efforts were being made to evacuate the 80 Americans remaining at the embassy in Madrid, William W. Corcoran, American consul at Vigo, announced he had appealed to all Americans in that area to get out. While some persons have expressed fear of danger only if insurgents are defeated, others are evacuating by boat.

John P. Hurley, consul at Marseilles, reported 57 Americans and 22 Puerto Rican Nationals are in the Majorca area. Of that number 11 Americans and three Puerto Ricans were expected to leave at once. Seven Americans and six Puerto Ricans are reported to be financially unable to live elsewhere and three Americans are ill and cannot be moved.

Thirst Also Perils San Sebastian

San Sebastian, Spain, Aug. 10 (AP)—Hunger and thirst menaced this besieged loyalist seaside resort today.

Rebel guns pounded away at its determined defenders, its citizens, its once-sleepy streets, its homes and modest collection of business establishments patronized in a happier day by the seashore holiday crowds.

Day by day the rebels, intent upon wiping out what little vestige of loyalist strength there is on the Bay of Biscay, shell the city. Defeat of the loyalists within it means passageway to the sea for insurgents who want more arms and ammunition.

(Advices from both Hendaye, France, and Madrid said the insurgents were congregating in large force south of San Sebastian and nearby Irun apparently for a vicious assault on both cities for the purpose of protecting the rearguard of the Fascist legions attempting to take Madrid.)

Food was becoming scarce. Officials admitted even water was begin rationed. Rebels have cut of part of the city's water supply, and each person is forced to get along on half the water he normally uses.

A similar situation is said to exist in both Renteria and Irun.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

CITY BAN FACES MORE BEANO PARLORS

Owners of a Huntington avenue Beano parlor, closed by suspension of its license, were called this afternoon to the office of Acting-Mayor John I. Fitzgerald, who offered them opportunity to show reason, if any, why they should be permitted to resume their game.

At the same tie, the acting mayor and City Councillor Robert Gardner Wilson, Jr., chairan of the council's committee on licenses, announced themselves ready to listen, formally, to further evidence concerning alleged infractions of the law by beano parlors still in operation.

Beano establishments throughout the city faced the threat of additional license suspensions as the official probe into what Councillor Wilson has branded as the "Beano racket" went into its second week.

Two Beano parlors in particular, were under close surveillance, with a careful check being made of their payments to charities in whose names they are operating.

Federal agents, meantime, were keeping close tab today on the Beano situation in Boston and other sections of the state.

In the hands of government investigators, it was revealed, is already detailed information concerning bank accounts, safe deposit boxes and political connections of "higher-ups" reported to be behind big-time Beano operations.

Wilson reiterated his charge today that certain Beano games in Boston are backed by racketeers who are reaping enormous profits while turning little or nothing over to their sponsoring charities.

"We will drive these racketeers out of Boston," Wilson asserted. "Our only message to them is 'Close up and get out.'"

Wilson intimated that investigation was now being made in an effort to determine who spent $18,000 allegedly invested in furnishings and equipment of one new Beano parlor.

GAMES CANCEL CONTRACTS

It was also revealed today that several Beano operators had cancelled contracts with churches and fraternal and educational organizations for winter operation of their games.

It was said the probe into the conduct of the game here had caused the cancellations. According to report, churches and other organizations had been accustomed to engage operators to stage beano parties for them for a percentage of the profits.

Promoters of a $1500 Beano game, scheduled to start next Sunday at Nantasket Beach, have aroused the ire of State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, Democratic nominee for Governor, and a number of other prominent men.

Hurley and the others declared their names were being used without their knowledge and authority in connection with the promotion of the game.

They demanded that their names be removed from literature advertising the game and stated that they would press a complete investigation of the operation of the series of Beano games advertised as starting next Sunday.

MAINE LOSES HUGE LIQUOR PROFITS

Augusta, Me., Aug. 10—The State Liquor Commission bought more than $3,000,000 worth of whiskey, brandy, vodka, rum, gin, cordials, vermouth, bitters, prepared cocktails, wines and champagne in the fiscal year which ended June 30, it was learned today.

If the selling agents representing the makers received 40 per cent commission on this—and 40 per cent is the reputed standard in Maine — their proceeds would amount to more than $1,200,000.

It would be a service to the people of Maine if the liquor commission would deal directly with the makers instead of with middlemen collecting such huge profits, it was pointed out today by observers of the traffic.

POLITICIAN PROFITS

But political considerations appear to govern the placing of orders. Investigation shows that on a $15 case, the distillers retain only $9, paying out $6 as agents commissions.

The customer on the other hand pays not only $15 but 40 per cent more representing the make-up margin that the state liquor commission adds.

One agent for certain well known brands of spirits is a prominent Democratic politician with a relative working for the state liquor commission.

OFTEN RUN SHORT

According to reports, the 34 state liquor stores operated by the State Liquor Commission never run short of his brands of liquor, but these stores frequently run out of some popular brands forcing customers to buy less desirable products.

The concerns he represents sold several hundred thousand dollars worth of goods to the state last year.

Another selling agency, representing seven large manufacturers and distributors of liquor, is a corporation known as Maine Liquors, Inc.

It was organized last year with an Old Town coffin factor ysuperintendent as treasurer and his son, a New York restaurant man, as the president.

This corporation was organized Ma 6, 1935, five days after Stillman E. Woodman resigned as liquor commission chairman to accept appointment to the highway commission, and three days before Sheriff David Walton of Androscoggin County became liquor commission chairman.

ORGANIZERS PROMINENT

Maine Liquors Inc., was organized in the office of Clifford & Clifford in Lewiston and still has its headquarters there.

This is one of the best known law firms in Lewiston. The partners are John D. Clifford and his brother, William. The former is U. S. Attorney for Maine with headquarters at Portland and both are prominent in the Democratic party.

Herbert A. Rackliff was named president of the new corporation. His father, Charles E. Rackliff of Oldtown, who has since died, was named treasurer. Miss Grace I. Penley of Lewiston was made clerk.

Maine Liquor, Inc., set out on its corporative career with authorization from the state to manufacture, transport and deal in all kinds of malt and distilled beverages, and to act as agent in the same line of endeavor.

$40,000 COMMISSION

Neither of the Radcliffs took an active part in the conduct of the concern.

During 1935 the Maine State Liquor Commission bought $101,759 worth of goods from four companies represented by Maine Liquor Inc, and 40 per cent commission on that would be more than $40,000.

Maine Liquors, Inc., also sells Maine Apple Brandy to the state, on its own account, collecting some $7,000 for this product last year.

Agent's commissions on other brands of liquor, however, would run much higher than the estimated commissions of this corporation.

Just one of the distillers represented by the Democratic politician with the relative on the commission sold the state of Maine nearly $200,000 worth of liquor in 1935.

1,000 CUSTOMERS

The offices of Clifford & Clifford were also the scene of the formation of another corporation, May 15, 1935, known as Eastern, Inc., a successor to Eastern Distributors, Inc., which had been organized in 1933.

This corporation was authorized by its charter to manufacture, transport, and trade in malt beverages and whiskey, gin, rum, brandy and wine, as well as to blend liquors.

The original incorporators were John M. Wiseman of Lewiston, president and treasurer, Chester M. Foss, a portland accountant, and William H. Clifford. The articles were sworn to before Miss Grace Penley, who had been elected clerk in the case of the Maine Liquors, Inc.

Wiseman is the son of George A. Wiseman, shoe merchant and ice cream company owner.

The corporation has confined itself chiefly to dealing in beer, having more than 1000 restaurants, grocery stores and other licensed retail dispensaries as its customers in the southern and central portions of the state.

GREEN'S WIDOW PUT IN CHARGE OF ESTATE

Kaufman, Tex., Aug. 10 (AP)—Mrs. Mabel H. Green, widow of Colonel Edward H. R. Green, railroad magnate, was named permanent administratrix of his vast estate, estimated at $80,000,000, in a brief hearing here today.

County Judge Ben Brooks, Texas' youngest jurist, made permanent the appointment of Mrs. Green, temporarily named after application for letters of administration were filed July 28.

Judge Brooks set her bond at $50,000, which he described as an "appropriate bond for the Texas holdings of the estate at this particular time."

He stressed, however, that the amount of the bond would be increased as the value of the estate is learned.

A three-man appraisal board was named to complete an inventory and appraisal of the estate within 60 days.

Mrs. Green's appointment was not contested, Attorneys for Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilks of New York, sister of Colonel Green, was reported as possible contestants.

A will Colonel Green made in 1908, naming his sister sole heir to his fortune, was filed in Port Henry, N. Y., recently. The document made no provision for his widow, whom he gave $500,000 in cash and $125,000 in Liberty bonds as a wedding gift in 1917.

W. P. Allen of Terrell, long-time friend of Green, was the sole witness today. He said Colonel Green came to Terrell in "either 1892 or 1893" and maintained a domicile there until he was 60 years of age.

"Wherever he was, Colonel Green always came to Terrell to vote in presidential elections," the banker said. "So far as I know, he never abandoned his domicile at Terrell."

This fact, established through Allen's testimony, was expected to play a major part in any possible future controversy over disposition of the estate.

Under Texas laws, Mrs. Green is entitled to all personal property accrued by her husband subsequent to their marriage.

TRAP SLAYER BY DICTOGRAPH

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 10 (AP)—An early trial was promised today for Martin Moore, 22, Negro hotel employe whom Sheriff Laurence Brown said confessed he killed Helen Clevenger, blonde New York co-ed, in a moment of panic when he went to her room to rifle it.

Solicitor Zeb V. Nettles said the gangling hall boy at the fashionable Battery Park Hotel, where the New York University student was staying, would be tried at a term of court beginning next Monday.

The prisoner, arrested Saturday night and questioned for hours before Sheriff Brown said he confessed he shot and clubbed the 18-year-old girl to death, was held in the county's penthouse jail atop its skyscraper courthouse.

Information that finally broke the baffling mystery, officers disclosed, was a tip from Banks Taylor, a Negro pantry boy at the hotel, that Moore owned a pistol of the type used in the crime.

They arrested Moore and put him and Taylor into a cell into which a dictograph had been installed.

As the officers listened, Brown said, Taylor told Moore that he knew he had not lent the pistol to the bell boy and that he should go ahead and tell the officers of the crime. The two Negroes nearly had a fight, Brown said.

After the youths had been in the cell for about an hour an officer entered and accused Moore of Miss Clevenger's death, informing him that his fingerprints—non-existent—had been found on the bed lamp in the girl's room.

Then Moore, Sheriff Brown said, "broke down" and confessed, thinking he was trapped.

FIRES IN 7 STATES

Sweep Thousands of Acres

By the Associated Press

Forest fires burned stubbornly in seven states today, destroying valuable timber, homes and farms and defying the efforts of thousands of men.

While numerous crews of fire-fighters and scores of evacuated families looked hopefully for rain, plumes of smoke rolled over wooded sections in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Wyoming, Idaho, Washington and California.

A brush fire ran wild in Alberta, Canada, endangering the "E. P." ranch owned by King Edward of England, about 45 miles south of Calgary.

Some of the fires had burned since Wednesday.

Two deaths were attributed to fires. Archie Murphy, 22, of Sioux Falls, S. D., was injured fatally when a falling timber crushed him. An unidentified man was burned to death in the vicinity of Palo and Markam, Minn.

Lightning and a generally dry condition brought on by torrid rainless weeks made the fires easy to start and hard to control.

Social Season at Summer Resorts Now at Its Height

By BETTY ALDEN

WE ARE CONSTANTLY WRITING about feminine fashions, yet every once in a while something unusual in masculine attire catches our eye, like the colorful evening suit of Count Guardabassi, who is spending the summer at Old Fort at Prides Crossing . . . Formal summer evening attire for most men consists of black trousers with white coat, but the Count effectively reverses the process . . .

ANNE WHICHER

On several formal occasions we have seen him in white trousers, a starched shirt and a Mediterranean blue jacket which has a decided nautical cut . . . This outfit may be quite commonplace along the Italian Riviera, but brings quite an unusual and pleasing bit of color to our shores . . .

The Count's blue harmonized well with his wife's ruby red gown as they danced together at the Casino in Magnolia over the week-end . . . their foursome included the Italian consul in Boston, Guido Segre, and Mrs. Segre . . . They were interested in watching some of the contestants in the Casino's contest for prettiest girl on the North Shore dancing around and winning the envious glances of their friends . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Gray Foster were celebrating the birthday of the head of their house, and had a number of friends, including the Livingston Rowes, to aid in their merrymaking . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, Jr., Nora Bullitt and Caroline Hunnewell were at another table, and still others in the crowd were John Hall, Hyde Cox, the John D. Gannetts, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Small of Magnolia with their daughters, Peggy and Betty, Peggy Brainerd and Marileeds Heard . . .

* * *

Anne Whicher and her mother, Mrs. John T. Whicher of Clyde street, Brookline, returned last evening from their long motor trip to the West Coast . . . They had a wonderful time, but seem more than happy and relieved to escape the desert heat and have another whiff of Boston's salty breeze . . .

Anne was a debutane of last winter, and besides attending in the frivolities of a first year out, managed to see to it that she came through her freshman year at Briarcliff Junior College with flying colors . . .

THE DEBUT OF Miss Eleanor Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Young of Newport, will be the principal event of the aristocrat of American summer resorts this week . . . Miss Young's presentation will be a large dance at Beechwood, the Vincent Astor villa, and practically every smart member of the summer colony will dine at one or another of the round of dinner parties preceding the dance . . .

This is the first of several similar parties for Newport debs . . . Next week, Count and Countess Alfonso Villa will introduce their daughter, Consuelo, and Miss Ulrica Hubbard, granddaughter of Mrs. Drexel Dahlgren, will also make her bow in Newport . . .

Jack and Tuckie Astor are returning to Chetwode tomorrow to dust off the cinders and such from a three-week trip to the West Coast on their private train . . . Virginia Middleton French, Tuckie's sister, and James M. Neville are returning with them and will stay to help Jack celebrate his twenty-fourth birthday on Friday . . .

Vanderbilts and Astors are giving the public a treat tomorrow by opening the gardens of their Newport estates for the benefit of the Civic League . . . The two estates to be opened are Chetwode and Oakland Farm, the William H. Vanderbilts' Newport home . . . Mrs. Vanderbilt is giving a small luncheon party also tomorrow . . .

Dinners, theater parties and teas still hold the attention of Bar Harbor colonists . . . yesterday afternoon, Miss Frances Coleman held open house at Eaglestone, from 3 until 5, and guests were permitted to ramble through her seaside garden, all for the cause of the American Red Cross . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Tweed and Mrs. Stuart Duncan Preston gave a dinner party for fifty Saturday evening at the Studio Club in Southampton, L. JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

Strict supervision and discipline imposed on the 17 wing champions who were here last week for the 1936 national model plane flying tournament was an interesting feature of the four-day program for local members of the Junior Birdmen.

Since this was the initial national contest in this city, it was the first time Greater Boston members had come in contact with conditions surrounding the visit of the wing champions for the annual championship competition.

The 17 represented all of the large cities in the four corners of the country in which Birdmen wings are established. Under arrangements made previously with their wing commanders, they arrived on various trains on the same day.

From the time they reached Boston until they left, they were required, except where special permission was given, to remain in the group, eat their meals together, meet at certain times at headquarters in Hotel Statler and follow a routine laid out for them by national officers. The 17 included Frank A. Barrett, Jr., Brighton, the New England victor.

Time and again, individual youths in the group had to reject invitations to the homes of Boston members for dinners, theater parties and other special entertainments.

This was due to the fact that from the time the youths left their home cities until they returned, responsibility for their safety rested with the national officers.

It was impracticable, therefore, to let them wander away singly or in small groups to do as they pleased.

The program for entertainment was drawn to interest all of them and each was required to be in the party as they left for sight-seeing trips, luncheons or other activities.

Despite the general routine and supervision, the youths had plenty of time of their own. They were free to meet in their own rooms in the hotel with each other and with Boston members, take walks in the vicinity of headquarters and do much as they wished as long as they adhered to regular reports to national officers.

Upon their arrival each boy was required to turn over all his money, except two or three dollars, for safe keeping until the end of their visit. Previous experience had shown that unless this was done the champions were usually "broke" long before their visit ended. The money and valuables given to the national officers upon arrival were returned to them when they received their home-bound railroad tickets.

Symphonic Festival

Music lovers from Boston and all over Massachusetts are gathering at popular resorts in the Berkshire Hills, to be on hand for the third annual Symphonic Festival which will be held at Holmwood Mrs. Margaret Emerson's estate in Lenox.

The outstanding feature of the Festival will be the three concerts given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, on Thursday and Sunday evenings, and Saturday afternoon. Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who with Mrs. Koussevitzky is the house guest of Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, president of the festival corporation, will conduct the orchestra.

Mt. Vernon Birds In Harvard Display

Two golden pheasants that once strutted on the lawns of Mt. Vernon, a gift to George Washington in 1786 from the Marquis de la Lafayette, were put on display today in a glass case at the entrance of the zoological section of the Harvard Museum.

Mounted 150 years they show little sign of deterioration. The golden comb, and long sweeping tail of the cock still retain their rich colors. The hen is mottled brown and gray.

For many years a part of the exhibit in the Peale Museum, Philadelphia, they were brought to Harvard as part of the Tercentenary exhibits.

Magazine Cover Girl Is Bride

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 10 (AP)—A bank attorney who fell in love with a beautiful girl on a magazine cover will make her his bride Aug. 22.

Dolores Calles, Argentine film actress, was so irresistible as a picture that Hugo Steinmeyer left his law books forthwith to meet her, he said today.

Cecilian Guild Dance Is Gay Affair

IT MIGHT easily have been called a soiree of the season's brides . . . that Cecilian Guild dance at Pemberton Inn, Friday evening. At least it seemed that way from the number of newlyweds that attended the party. And their ranks are ever increasing.

Margaret Culhane and Jim Nolan are the latest couple to announce their candidacy for admission to the young married set. They provided the highlight of Friday's affair by announcing their engagement.

Margaret never looked lovelier in pale green net as she joyfully displayed her solitaire. She's the daughter of Mrs. James Culhane of Cambridge and was recently graduated from Emmanuel College.

Jim, son of Dr. and Mrs. William F. Nolan of Roslindale, received his degree from Holy Cross.

Colored Print

The thrills and delights of engagement days seemed an old story to Mr. and Mrs. Justin Connors. She was Mary Jane Ryan of Cambridge before her smart June wedding and for her post honeymoon appearance wore a frock of bright colored print.

Other guests at their table were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leary . . . the latter wearing pearls with her black chiffon gown . . . its hem edged with tiny dust ruffles.

Grace Sweeney, now Mrs. Charles Duffy, was very smart in black sheer, while another member of the June bride clique, Mrs. Francis Tribble, the former Ruth Fessler, returned from Pittsfield to attend the supper dance. Also glimpsed the Walter Whalens, who are summering at Scituate. She was Fran Nelson, active in Notre Dame affairs.

Anticipating their honeymoon days were Mildred O'Donnell and Ted O'Brien who exchange their vows a week from Saturday. They viewed the evening's doings from their table for two . . . Mildred's dainty chiffon was topped with a good-looking wrap of eggshell moire.

Norinne Feeny, who has set her wedding day for the Saturday after Labor Day, was most attractive in pleated white crepe. Her fiance is Corbett Walsh of Boston.

Other members of the about-to-wed set who took in the dance were Helen Martineau and Tom Foley, Marion Cassidy and Bernie McNamara and Dot Groden and Paul McLaughlin.

Governor's Son

Leo Curley, son of the governor, was the center of much attention. He only had eyes for Marie O'Connell of Egypt who was a pretty exotic-looking individual. She wore a gown of black chiffon beneath her waist length cape of silver fox. The decolletage of the frock was edged with flat white flowers . . . bracelets of the same on her well-tanned arms.

Leo was spending the week-end with Walter Murphy who squired Kay Sweeney. Her robin's egg blue moire was sprinkled with diamenti. In the same party were Kathleen Sheerin, gardenias edging her black organza and Sylvia Daley, whose mauve printed crepe was belted with violet velvet.

Of course the guild's old stand-bys were there in goodly numbers . . . Mrs. Walter Rooney's turquoise net was most attractive with her golden tan . . . Mrs. Frank Lane, whose American beauty chiffon was topped with pleated cape and Mrs. Lawrence Murray, the proud mother of a three-months-old son, wore a taffeta frock beneath her redingote of blue net.

Helene Crosby's gown was quite the most graceful . . . a long cape of blue net topped her frock of dubonnet and blue print . . . flowers appliqued on the cape added a touch of individuality. Her escort was Paul Markey, while sister Elinor danced about with Dick White.

'Uncle, Give Us Bread'

RED WOMEN FIGHT AS POULTRY DIES

Arne Strom is a Danish poultry expert, who had lived in Canada and the United States. He was engaged by the Soviet government to help improve its state farms.

Accompanied by his wife and child, Mr. Strom went to Soviet Russia imbued with a deep sympathy for the Communist experiment.

He spent a year off the beaten track, on a state collective farm and traveling widely throughout the country.

Everywhere he went in Russia he heard the cry from a starving and miserable people, "Uncle, give us bread!" He returned to Denmark utterly disillusioned.

With the pitiable cry of the tortured millions, "Uncle, Give Us Bread!" as the title, Mr. Strom has published the record of his experiences.

The book was translated from Danish and issued in England in the spring of 1936.

By ARNE STROM

ARTICLE THIRTEEN

Information had reached the board of directors that "the poultry farm at Povorino suffered from deficiencies in many respects"—I wondered whether somebody had not read my letter and passed my words off as his own—and it was to be hoped that I would see my way to set them right.

I was especially asked to "improve the food rations of the poultry." There was only millet and barley for food on the farm, no wheat or corn, no skimmed milk, no meal, no crushed seashells, no cod-liver oil and not even proper green fodder for the chicks.

So it was both a chemical and physical impossibility to make a balanced food ration for growing chickens or laying hens.

My beautiful dreams of setting this farm on its feet again were never realized. The hens and chickens died as before—only a little quicker, for the veterinary doctor systematically did all he could to spread the sickness to the whole stock.

A blood test for tuberculosis showed that in some of the houses up to 60 per cent were so strongly infested that they must be killed and when a few weeks later we tested the remaining lot, over 40 per cent of them were ill.

Women Furious

In none of the houses on the farm was the tuberculosis percentage below 18. Most of the chickens who had survived the pullorum died afterwards either from coccidiosis or from pneumonia or other diseases.

Innumerable delegations, deputations and commissions arrived in Povorino during that autumn. With thick portfolios under their arms they followed me around the farm. With wrinkled brow and learned, worried looks they absolutely agreed with me in everything I said.

I had insisted on muslin windows being put up in all the poultry houses, in order to improve the ventilation; but in this question Mikailovsky, the manager and the doctors had all been against me. There was no muslin to be had, they said, and the clay walls, which had manure and straw in them, could not stand having new windows cut into them.

One day, however, I found a large roll of muslin there in the attic of the depot and I at once went round to the manager and gave him a bit of my mind. I brought in the three capital letters, (G. P. U.), and the effect was wonderful. On the following day four houses were supplied with muslin windows and in the course of a few weeks the chickens in these houses were cured of their colds. But no more muslin was to be had.

Marushka told me that the manager's wife, the doctor's wife, Mikailovsky's wife, as well as several other wives were furious with me, because I had taken their muslin which had been stored up for next summer's dresses.

Cruelty to the Old

At a vodka booth two women were having a violent fight. They tore out each other's hair in large handfuls and yelled and kicked. One of them was old, the other young. Peasants, wearing heavy goatskin coats in spite of the heat, formed a circle around the fighters, but not one of them tried to interfere.

Suddenly the old woman fell over some steps and lay there as if dead. I had already become hardened against horrors in Russia. If I had tried to lift up the woman the other fury might have scratched my eyes out, for she stood ready to attack again if her antagonist recovered. It must rest with the Russian police to settle this affair.

A big grey tuft of hair lay on the step against the old woman's ear. We passed by quickly, asking a grinning onlooker whether a doctor had not better be sent for.

"To hell with the doctor," he answered, "she is a swine."

He spat towards her. Snapping his finger against his throat with a funny hollow sound he added as explanation:

"Vodka."

We went on filled with loathing. On our way home a couple of hours later our lorry passed the same spot. The place was almost deserted, but the woman still lay there in exactly the same position. The wind had slightly blown the grey tuft of hair away from her head, and it lay in a little pool of blood.

I ordered the driver to stop and shouted to some men who stood a little way off.

"What's up?"

They guffawed loudly and answered something I did not understand, but judging by their laughter and gesticulations it must have been something very low.

I called for the "militia" as the police are called in Russia, but circumstances had already made the police quite superfluous in Russian towns. A young Communist once told me that the militia were only employed to direct traffic when necessary and as sentries. Here in Soviet Russia the people themselves were the police.

I had advised both the manager and the powers that be in Moscow to cross our peasant hens with white leghorns. Of course no answer had come from Moscow, but one day all unexpectedly I received orders to go to a big poultry farm in the northern Caucasus and bring back 300 white leghorn cockerels.

It was arranged that Comrade Ibrahimov was to accompany me to Belaya Kalitva, the town in the northern Caucasus.

We were to go through Stalingrad, which lies on the Volga, and which I very much looked forward to seeing. All the stations we passed showed the same miserable sight of wretched beggars, mostly waiting peasants who either wandered about on the platforms, or drowsed and slept in big miserable heaps of dirt and hopeless poverty.

In Stalingrad we had to wait more than 12 hours for the connection with Belaya Kalitva, and we had decided to spend the time in visiting the big tractor factory.

Within the grounds of the factory were some enormous workers' dwellings just like those one sees in other countries, but here they bore everywhere that melancholy stamp of want of civilization.

Stallingrad Filthy

Far too many broken windowpanes, gardens and courtyards full of weeds, and most unsavory bedclothes airing on the balconies. There was also an Insnab, which we visited. It was crowded with fat, swarthy women just like those in Voronezh and Moscow. Ibrahimov opened his eyes wide when he saw all the good things one would buy if one belonged to the privileged classes in Russia.

A nice German lady to whom I talked for some time about the extraordinary state of affairs in Russia was very outspoken as soon as she had made sure that I was really and truly a foreigner.

"My husband and I have only one thought—to go back to Germany as soon as we get a chance," she whispered.

"Life is awful here in Stalingrad if one cannot bow to the Communist system—or rather lack of system," she added, smiling.

"Nearly all the women you see here in the Insnab are kept by Russian experts or members of the party. My husband and I live very quietly and see nobody."

We had had a very good dinner in the American stolovaja (restaurant), but I still felt I could do with a plate of soup before the train started for Belaya Kalitva. One could not tell what sort of a hole that place would be.

We sat down at one of the unappetizing tables in the railway restaurant and I ordered dinner for Ibrahimov and myself. Everything was filthily dirty and the plates that were thrown down in front of us were greasy and bore many fingerprints.

Starving Children

I took them to the counter and cursed the plate-washer roundly. They all stared at me in surprise and the waitress opened her eyes wide. It was evidently the first time they had had such a complaint. She studiously scalded the plates in boiling water, and I succeeded in snatching them from her before she had managed to dry them on an exceedingly black and greasy cloth.

No sooner had we begun eating than several little street urchins appeared round the big table. With hungry eyes they followed our spoons from the plate to our mouths. They seemed positively crazy with hunger, and my appetite deserted me, for I never learned to enjoy a meal in the presence of hungry human beings or animals.

I pushed my plate across to an eight-year-old boy who sat next to me. He put his mouth into the soup like a little pig and in a few seconds had drunk every drop of it.

It nearly drove me mad to see hunger in the eyes of the other children. They certainly did not count on getting anything for themselves, but still there they sat in the vain hope that the very sight of food would stave off their gnawing hunger.

What if I ordered some soup for these seven or eight boys? I looked about me and wherever I turned my eyes they met the sad gaze of children.

The scene on the platform at Tsinovaya came to my mind. I gave up the idea, paid my bill and quickly went on to the platform to get some fresh air and to escape from the melancholy horror of these children's eyes.

The fourteenth chapter of Arne Strom's amazing book will appear in Tuesday's Boston Evening American.

SO. SHORE BUS OUSTER SOUGHT

Irate and footsore residents of Weymouth, Rockland, Braintree, North Hanover and Norwell today signed petitions demanding immediate revocation of the operating license of the Lovell Bus Lines, Inc., which had been crippled by a strike of 35 drivers for the past 10 days.

In their petitions, which will be presented to the Weymouth Board of Selectmen at a special meeting late today the residents charge John F. Lovell, president of the bus line with full responsibility for the strike.

The petitions state that because of his refusal to bargain collectively, or serve the commuters of these five towns Lovell had violated his franchise by refusing to run the buses or arbitrate the question of wages with the striking drivers.

Montreal's 'Miracle Man'

MILLIONS HAIL BROTHER ANDRE

The story of Brother Andre's life of miracles and how this remarkable ninety-one-year-old man is rapidly achieving his great ambition of building a $4,000,000 shrine of St. Joseph on top of Mount Royal in his home city of Montreal is begun by Peggy Doyle, staff correspondent of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser

By PEGGY DOYLE

Montreal, Que., Aug. 10—Once he scrubbed floors and mended the garments of Notre Dame students, where now the world treks in vast pilgrimages to the door of his cell like study.

He is the famed Brother Andre (Frere Andre to the French-Canadians), "Miracle Man of Montreal," who quietly observed his 91st birthday yesterday.

There was no celebration on his natal day at his request—just the mute testimony to his great goodness and example offered by thousands of kneeling pilgrims within St. Joseph's oratory on beautiful Mount Royal and on the 97 steps that lead to this lofty $4,000,000 basilica.

Spurns Thanks

As simple and humble as when, as a passionately religious but pitiably frail young man, he sought entrance to the congregation of the Holy Cross at Saint Laurent, the gentle Brother Andre is roused to anger only when a grateful suppliant attempts to thank him for the sudden gift of health, domestic harmony or mental peace.

"It is God's work," he says, fixing a stern eye on the abashed pilgrim "God's work and St. Joseph's. It is God and St. Joseph you must thank."

But to genuinely appreciate the rare sanctity and simplicity of the little brother in the frayed black cassock, who is the reason for approximately 2,000,000 persons to annually visit Montreal, you must know about his humble beginning.

Born at Saint Gregoire D'Iberville, in the province of Quebec, Canada, on August 9, 1845, he was the sixth child of Isaac Bessette and Clothilde Foisy Bessette, and had 11 brothers and sisters, two of whom died in infancy. He was baptized Alfred.

Born in Poverty

His father, who like St. Joseph worked as a wheelwright and joiner, was a poverty-stricken, deeply religious French-Canadian. He was known throughout the sparsely settled district as an industrious, skilled but unsuccessful workman, who, as did others of his trade, frequently hired out as a day laborer when he could get no employment at his chosen stint.

The Bessette home, little more than a frontier shack, was on the outskirts of a towering forest which had supplied the hewn logs for its construction, its only adornment a large and shining crucifix that hung from a peg in the wall.

It was all work and no play for the little Bessettes virtually as soon as they were big enough to walk. And too, there was religion. Before the family had breakfasted at their scant board and prior to their retirement to bumpy, straw-covered cots, all gathered for prayers devoutly recited in unison. Sunday mass in the frontier chapel provided their only social intercourse with neighbors.

When the little Alfred was five years old his father removed his family to Farnham, Quebec, in the vain hope of better working conditions. Instead he found there even less opportunity and, as the result of worry and failing health induced by his losing struggle to provide for his loved ones, Isaac Bessette died some years later.

Valiantly, but vainly, his widow tried to provide the barest necessities for her brood of nine. Neighbors, many of them as poor as herself, shared their mite with her but the odds were against her, and as is the custom among French-Canadians, where a large family of orphans is left without support, she was forced to divide up her family among relatives.

Alfred, the child the Widow Bessette worried most about because of his continued ill health, was sent to an uncle, Timothee Nadeau, of St. Cesaire De Rouville. He lived with his uncle until he was 15.

The years of poverty, with its inevitable twin, mal-nutrition, had left their mark on the frail, undersized lad. He was unable to attend the village school regularly enough to acquire even the rudiments of an education.

His uncle, after a day's toiling in the sun-parched fields, was too exhausted to attempt the tuition of his eager but ignorant young nephew at night, and so the boy grew older in years but not in learning.

At 12, he was working in the fields when he was able to do so, which was not often. Later, he tried to learn the trade of a shoemaker, and then that of a baker, but his failing health did not permit him long to remain at inside work.

But let him tell you of this youthful and trying period in his life:

"I was never very strong. From the time when I was a little boy ten years old, I have suffered from dyspepsia. It seems as if I was always sick from it. I have had it all during my life and it still annoys me.

"When I was living with my uncle and was very young I could not go to school much because I was always sick. Once I tried to become a shoemaker but I could not stand bending over and being inside the place so much and my health made me give it up.

"Then, after a little while when I thought I was strong enough I tried to become a baker but again I found that my health would not let me do inside work. It seems that I was never very strong."

Recognized by Cure

At about this time, working as a day-laborer for some of the farmers of Saint Cesaire, Albert won the attention and soon the friendship of the local cure, Abbe Springer, abbe provencal of his order, was the first to recognize the lad's deeply religious nature.

He took him to live at the rectory where young Bessette eagerly performed odd jobs. While he could not learn to read and write, Alfred gained a certain amount of culture from the old priest.

Daily it grew upon him that the black-robed man of God was the most important man in the community and that, in fact, the church was the most important part of the community.

It was this experience in the employ of the good Father Springer that proved the turning-point in the life of the untutored, unprepossessing youth who was to become the "Miracle Man of Montreal."

NAME SCHOOL FOR TEACHER, VOTER URGES

Urging that Roxbury's new school building in Eliot square be named after William L. Phinney, retired headmaster of the Dudley school, a Boston Evening American reader makes an eloquent plea today for memorials to teachers.

The plea is embodied in a letter which the reader included with a ballot which he cast in the Boston Evening American-Boston Sunday Advertiser Roxbury School Name referendum.

The ballot was one of hundreds which are deluging the School Name Ballot Editor.

TEXT OF LETTER

Says the letter urging the naming of the Roxbury school after former Headmaster Phinney:

"As a former Roxbury resident and on general principles, I am in favor of honoring in any possible way our veteran school teachers. Certainly it is the least we can do for them in recognition of their long terms of faithful and trying work.

"I don't believe in tacking a politician's name on a public school. Politicians generally get what they want while they are in office. But we seldom hear of school teachers retiring wealthy.

"With all due respect to the church and the clergy, there are plenty of opportunities to honor them in their own field of endeavor.

NAME RELATIVE

"I think it is a beautiful custom to place the names of our honored teachers where a little boy or girl in future years can say, 'There's the name of the teacher from whom my grandma and grandpa learned their lessons.'

"I wrote a letter some years ago to the school committee of my home town, not Roxbury, asking them to consider naming a new school after a woman who had given her life to teaching and who had labored faithfully for the community for almost half a century.

"I had many with me in this movement, but the school was finally named for a school committee member's relative, a young man who had been 'caught in the draft' of 1917.

"Render unto Caesar—etc.

"Yours,

"MICHAEL ANDERSON,

"Everett."

That's one man's opinion, forcibly expressed.

What's YOUR opinion?

He was denounced as an agitator, Socialist and "Red."

2 CLUES TO DEAD GIRL

Blonde's Notes Baffle Police

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 10—If she couldn't "be caviar," she wouldn't "be rice pudding."

So wrote the mysterious young blonde who shot herself to death in a dramatically staged suicide in her room at a fashionable seaside hotel here.

Police were studying notes in the girl's handwriting today. They were endeavoring to piece together from pen and ink jottings, discovered among the victim's belongings, clues to her identity and to the abnormal state of mind which influenced her to take her life.

2 ASHEVILLE CLUES

"I shall not live to be an old woman," one of the notes read. "For old women have only to remember how they were loved by nobody at all.

"If I can't be caviar, I won't be rice pudding.

"Would like to bow and kowtow to grinning wooden gods, thump painted devil drums."

A torn sticker on one of the girl's traveling bags bore an Asheville, N. C., stamp. There was also in her baggage a shoe horn bearing the name of an Asheville store.

BEAUTIFUL IN DEATH

Police Chief George C. Abbott and Deputy Sheriff Warren J. Tribout had turned their attention to the North Carolina city today.

The victim registered at the hotel as Mrs. Henry Faye of Lake Pleasant, Mass., but police have been unable to find any record of such a person. The name "Henry" was mispelled on the register.

Even in death today the suicide was still beautiful. She was between 25 and 30, five feet five inches tall, naturally blonde, lovely of complexion with a slight suntan. Her eyes were hazel gray.

"Here's the river shown on the map," said Briant, pointing to a stream flowing out of the bank. "Let's call it East river, since it runs towards the east of the island."

"That's fine," said Moko, "and if we follow the current of East river we'll reach its mouth."

"Shall we land now?" asked Jack.

"Yes," said Briant, "and we'll camp under the trees."

They jumped on the shore which formed the end of a little cove. After the yawl had been moored they took out the guns and provisions. A fire was lit at the foot of a big green oak.

They had a dinner of biscuits and cold meat, then spread the blankets on the ground and slept soundly. The guns and revolvers were loaded, but the night passed quietly.

"Come on, let's go!" cried Briant, who was the first to wake up at six o'clock.

In a few minutes they were in the yawl, carried by the current of the river.

The current was quite strong enough—the tide had been going down already for half an hour—and there was no need for the oars.

"Maybe," said Moko, "this tide will carry us right down to the sea if East River is not more than five or six miles long. Its current is very rapid."

"I hope so," said Briant, "we'll need two or three tides to come back."

The yawl was making better than a mile an hour. East River flowed exactly northeast. Its bed was deeper and narrower than that of Zealand River—only about thirty feet wide—which explained the rapidity of its current. All that Briant was afraid of was that it would change into rapids and whirlpools and would not be navigable down to the coast.

They were going through a thick forest . . . oaks, cork trees, pines and firs predominated.

Briant recognized a tree found in New Zealand.

This tree—which spreads its branches like an umbrella—bears conical fruits covered with a shiny scale.

"This must be a pineapple tree!" cried Briant.

"To settle it," said Moko, "let's stop a moment. It's well worth while!"

They put the yawl along the left shore. Briant and Jack jumped out and brought back an armful of pines that proved a luscious find for the greedy ones of the colony!

They concluded that this forest was as full of game as the forests on the western shore of Family Lake.

Briant saw bands of ostriches and goats, a couple of mustangs, and hundreds of fowls.

About eleven o'clock they came to the sea. What a difference in the outlook to that on the west coast of Chairman Island!

There was a deep bay which was an accumulation of rocks where Briant was sure they could have found twenty caves.

This coast was habitable, and the mouth of East River formed a natural harbor containing plenty of water even at low tide.

Briant looked towards the eastern horizon of this vast bay which was deserted. Not a ship in view! Not a sign of land! Chairman Island seemed as isolated on its eastern side as on the west.

Briant was expecting this, although he had hoped to find land. His hope gone he named it Deception Bay.

"Well," he said, "we'll not be able to make our way back on this side!"

"Well, Master Briant," said Moko, "one always goes by one road or another! Right now I think we should have lunch."

"All right," replied Briant, "and let's be quick about it. When can we go back?"

"Right now if we want to make the most of the tide."

"We can't do that. I want to observe the horizon under more favorable conditions from the top of those high rocks on the beach."

"Then," said Moko, "we'll have to wait for the next tide at ten o'clock tonight."

"Won't you be afraid to navigate then?" asked Briant.

"No, we'll have a full moon."

"All right, Moko. We'll start back tonight."

The afternoon was spent in examining the coast. It was sheltered by trees which came right up to the foot of the rocks. Game was abundant, and Briant killed a few partridges for dinner.

The characteristic outlook of the shore was its mass of granite blocks. There were many deep excavations in which shelter could be found, and plenty of halls and store-rooms for the needs of the colony.

Briant wondered why the French castaway had chosen the west coast of Chairman Island instead of taking refuge here.

He thought it probable, that Francois Baudoin, before exploring this territory, had already taken shelter in French Den and, being less exposed to the storms off the sea, had decided that it was better to remain.

'What's That?'

About two o'clock Briant, Jack and Moko scaled a thick rock about a hundred feet high for further observation. From there it was easy to see that Chairman Island was really fertile only in its central part.

The eastern horizon was outlined sharply, but there was nothing in that direction . . . Nothing but the vast ocean!

The boys were about to go down to the beach when Moko stopped Briant.

"What's that?" he asked, stretching his hand towards the northeast.

* * *

Briant looked through his telescope and a little above the horizon he saw a white spot which could easily have been mistaken for a cloud if the sky had not been absolutely clear at that moment. After looking a long time, Briant was certain that this spot did not move nor its shape alter.

"I don't know what it can be," he said, "unless it's a mountain, but a mountain doesn't have that appearance."

Were there some high lands over there? Or was this white coloration only the luminous reflection of the water? It was this last thought that Jack and Moko accepted, but Briant made reservations on that subject.

The exploration completed, they returned to the mouth of the East River. Moko roasted the partridges and, after a good meal, Jack and Briant went for a walk along the beach while waiting for the tide to come up for their departure.

Moko remained at the yawl. Suddenly he heard moans and a loud voice. He was not mistaken, that voice was Briant's.

Were the brothers in danger? The cabin-boy ran towards the beach. He stopped short. What he saw prevented him from going any further.

Jack was on his knees before Briant! . . . He seemed to implore him, to ask his forgiveness! . . . Those were the moans which Moko had heard.

The cabin-boy would have liked to run away. It was too late! He had heard everything and understood everything. He knew now the fault which Jack had committed and which he had just confessed to his brother! The latter was crying out:

"You set us adrift! Why, you! . . . You who did such a thing! You who are the cause . . ."

"Forgive me, brother, please forgive me!"

"So this is why you have kept away from your comrades! . . . you were afraid of them! . . . ah! they must never know! No! not a word . . . not a word to anyone! . . ."

Moko would have given much to have heard nothing of this secret. But now he could not sham ignorance of it in front of Briant. A few moments later he was alone with Briant.

Overcall Abuses

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Even in these days of intelligent bidding, the overcall is widely abused. Players seem to overlook the fact that a bid is a promise to win in play a named number of tricks.

And when the opponents are quick to double, it is most unwise to count optimistically on the assistance partner may be able to furnish.

In the hand below, South's atrocious overcall met with swift punishment.

East dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

North:
♠ K 7 4
♡ Q J 10 4
♢ Q 4
♣ 10 8 7 5

West:
♠ A 6 3 2
♡ 9 7 2
♢ K J 6 2
♣ K 6

East:
♠ Q J 5
♡ A 8 5
♢ 7 3
♣ A Q 9 4 2

South:
♠ 10 9 8
♡ K 6 3
♢ A 10 9 8 5
♣ J 3

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♣	1 ♢ (1)	Dbl. (2)	Pass
Pass	Pass

(1) A player should not risk more than a two-trick set when vulnerable. This bid risks a three or four-trick set.

(2) West and his partner were excellent at defense. He could count, therefore, on obtaining the maximum number of tricks. The penalty might be quite lucrative and the worst that could happen would be for South to make his contract. This would still give him only a part-score of 40.

West opened the King of clubs and East followed with the discouraging deuce. West switched to the deuce of spades, dummy ducked and East won with the Jack. East returned a low trump and West won with the King. He then led another low spade and South was faced with a guess. He did not credit West with a repeated underlead of the Ace of spades and therefore ducked from dummy once more. East won with the Queen of spades and returned the suit.

The defenders subsequently won a club trick, another trump trick, and the Ace of hearts. In all they gathered in eight tricks for a 500 point penalty. They were well pleased with this result, since they had no play for a game at any contract of their own.

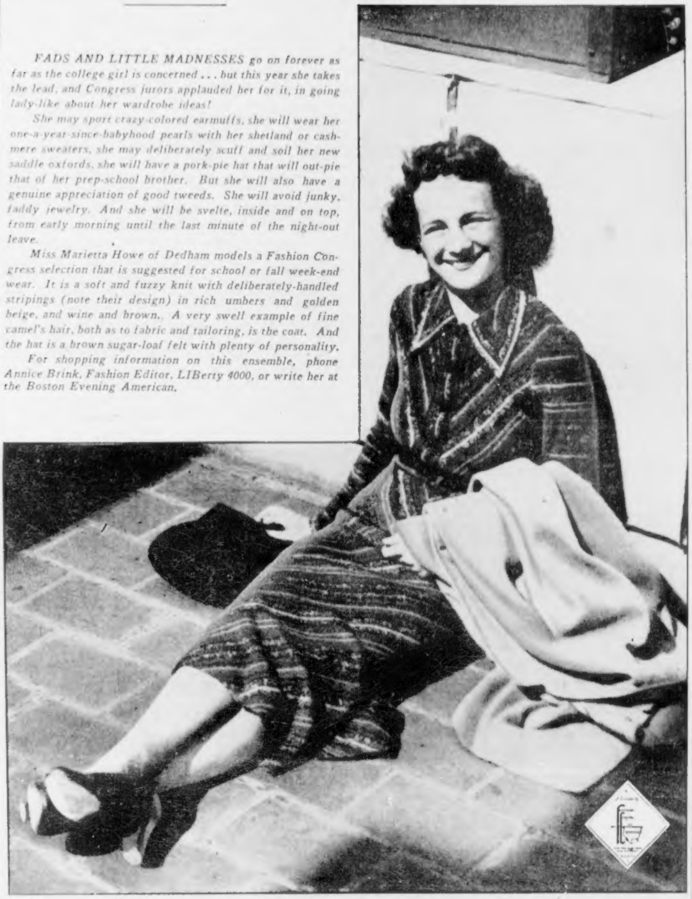
Congress Gives College Girl Style Tips

FADS AND LITTLE MADNESSES go on forever as far as the college girl is concerned . . . but this year she takes the lead, and Congress jurors applauded her for it, in going lady-like about her wardrobe ideas!

She may sport crazy-colored earmuffs, she will wear her one-a-year-since-babyhood pearls with her shetland or cashmere sweaters, she may deliberately scuff and soil her new saddle oxfords, she will have a pork-pie hat that will out-pie that of her prep-school brother. But she will also have a genuine appreciation of good tweeds. She will avoid junky, faddy jewelry. And she will be svelte, inside and on top, from early morning until the last minute of the night-out leave.

Miss Marietta Howe of Dedham models a Fashion Congress selection that is suggested for school or fall week-end wear. It is a soft and fuzzy knit with deliberately-handled stripings (note their design) in rich umbers and golden beige, and wine and brown. A very swell example of fine camel's hair, both as to fabric and tailoring, is the coat. And the hat is a brown sugar-loaf felt with plenty of personality.

For shopping information on this ensemble, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.



Married Comrades -:- By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 70

I DO NOT know anyone, unless it be my mother-in-law, who so revels in melodrama, whether of the cinema variety or real life, as does Katie, my maid.

As my words concerning an important secret reached her ears, she started as if she had been suddenly touched with an electric wire.

"You hear dot, Jeem?" she adjured her husband who had not moved a muscle, but who was looking at me with an intentness which showed that he was alive to the importance of what I was saying. "We got to keep a secret for Messis Graham. You get ready lock opp dot beeg mout' of yours."

"I no gif anytings avay to old vomans," she said, "but my head rollin' round so I tink eet comm off. I know ve no tell, und ve no let on ve know, but vot ees dees secret? I no understand."

"You are quite right, Katie," I said. "Now listen carefully, and I will tell you all about it. When I finish ask me any questions that you wish. I want you to understand the thing fully."

"Okay," she said, while Jim glared at her. "Shoot!"

When I had instructed them that they were to treat my uncle in every respect as if he were indeed my father, I finished with a reassurance.

"That will be easy for you, because I understand my father's twin brother looks so much like him that it will be hard for anyone to know which is which."

Katie threw up her head with a cocky gesture.

"I know, I bet. Dere alvays someting, even in tvins, eff you keep your eyes open—und mine nefer shut, you bet. But, oh! Jeem, Jeem! vot a racket dees is! Eet shoost like living in vun movie, only mosth movies nefer goot like dees."

JIM DISAPPROVES

She was fairly wriggling with delight, but her husband regarded her with patent disapproval.

"This isn't any movie," he told her. "And you'd better quit imagining it is. If we are going to act innocent, so Mr. Graham's mother doesn't catch on, we've got to watch our step."

Katie put her arms akimbo and regarded him with withering scorn.

"You get your own beeg feet in step und watch dem," she said. "Dot keep you so busy you no haf time to vorry about mine."

She put down her elbows and turned to me.

"Me, I shoost tink of sometings," she said. "Suppose Junior finds out dot ooncle ain't no grandpa? Or maybe you tell heem, but dot not so goot."

Clever Tricks for Garden

WHAT A LOT of clever gardening tricks young Mrs. Harris knows! No wonder her garden is the envy of the neighbors.

Here she is with a new idea on watering choice plants, or plants newly set out. She punches about four holes with a nail in the bottom of a tin can. Then with a trowel she sinks the can completely, near a plant, being careful not to damage roots.

She fills the can with water every day, and it slowly seeps out through the nail holes straight to the plant roots. It lasts a long time and induces plants to make deep root growth.

"It's really best to sink the cans when you set out your young plants," she says.

Mrs. Harris's garden is charmingly planted, vines and bushes placed just right, darling little rock garden, velvety lawn, border always gay with blooms in harmonious colors. She gets a lot of help from our 40-page booklet, Gardening Made Easy.

Glasses for Beauty!

New Types Flatter All Types of Faces

Don't put off wearing glasses for fear you may look older.

The wrinkles and furrows you get from squinting and straining to see are definitely more aging than the new types of glasses that are actually becoming and distinctive, declares Dorothy Cocks, in August Pictorial Review.

After consulting leading optometrists, oculists and opticians, she says glasses actually help your looks, but you must select them as carefully as you would a hat, or a costume, and you must wear them with assurance, not apologetically.

"Of course," she warns, "when I talk about choosing glasses, I mean choosing appropriate frames; an eyesight specialist should examine your eyes to determine the basic type of lens for you.

"Your glasses may either contrast sharply with your face, and be worn with forthright nonchalance, or they may harmonize with your features and coloring and thus be as unnoticeable as possible.

"Dark shell-rimmed spectacles are the ones many smart women wear for golf, tennis and motoring and other sports. They are boldly conspicuous.

"Rimless glasses are less conspicuous on the face than bound lenses. There are new styles of nose pieces and bows or shafts which do away with wobbly lenses and easy breakage."

Fashion has taken note of glasses and fitted them into the accessories of a smart person. The vogue for color is now extended to glass.

Optical experts have been studying color just as carefully as cosmetics experts have, and have done wonders in making glasses becoming.

"You can have glasses with nose pieces and bows of a gold so pink that it is almost flesh color.

"Frames of a translucent composition come in a range of tints for all the world like facepowder shades, so that you may select a rosy flesh or yellowish beige according to your skin. Maybe you don't think that's a smart way to make spectacles fade into your features!

"You can have your lenses tinted in delicate shades that resemble skin tones. Not the deep amber-tinted sun-glasses long familiar on Summer beaches, but palest flesh and rachel and mauve glass, so faintly colored as hardly to be noticeable, but infinitely less conspicuous because the tinted glass blends with the natural shadows around your eyes.

"I don't mean that you yourself can pick out tinted lenses as you do face powder to match your skin. The tinted lenses are designed primarily to admit or shut out certain rays of light, depending upon the condition of your eyes, which your examination for glasses will reveal."

The becomingness of different shapes of glasses has also been studied by optical experts.

"A round face," she says, "with rounded contours, round cheeks, round eye sockets, looks best with round lenses.

"On a heart-shaped face that narrows down through the cheeks to a pointed chin, lenses which are broad across the top, and narrow down almost to a point at the base, will show less.

"A patient and thoughtful eyesight specialist can design lenses for you that will parallel the outlines of your face and so completely harmonize with its contours as to be quite inconspicuous."

Try New Zest of Flavor

FROM MARTHA LEE'S MONDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

MUCH AS WE like our own American cooking, it is interesting to try the seasonings of our foreign neighbors, at least for the sake of variety.

Of course, not all foreign seasonings are available here, and for that matter not all of them suit our taste, but those which can be obtained frequently give our dishes a zest of flavor and gain for them a royal welcome.

Curry powder is a seasoning which has many possibilities in cookery, and especially in meat cookery, since its flavor, if added with discretion, adds a spiciness which enhances the delicious meat flavor. Curry powder, contrary to many ideas, is not one spice, but a combination of a dozen or more, mixed in its native country, East India, according to the likes of the family and according to the pocketbook.

Curry powder may be used as one uses paprika. A very small amount added to the cream sauce in which left-over meat is served adds a great deal of interest. It may be sprinkled over an escalloped meat dish along with the buttered bread crumbs to give it a spicy flavor that will be enjoyed.

Curry powder also makes a splendid addition to the lowly stew. It is particularly good with lamb stew when served with plain steamed rice.

CURRIED LAMB

2 pounds diced lamb shoulder
3 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons fat
1 small onion, sliced
1 teaspoon curry powder
½ tablespoon lemon juice
½ cup boiling water
½ cup strained tomatoes

Dredge diced lamb with flour and brown in hot fat. Add onion, curry powder, lemon juice, hot water and tomatoes. Cover and let cook very slowly until the meat is tender. Serve on a bed of fluffy steamed rice.

A typically German kind of seasoning is the sweet-sour flavor obtained by allowing meat to stand for several days in a pickle solution made by slightly sweetening vinegar and flavoring with onion, cloves, and various other spices. Much the same flavors may be obtained by cooking meat in a spiced vinegar solution.

SPICED STEAK

Round or chuck cut 1 inch thick
2 tablespoons fat
½ cup dilute vinegar
1 small onion
1 bay leaf
4 or 5 whole cloves
1 tablespoon sugar
Salt and pepper

Brown steak on both sides in hot lard. Add the dilute vinegar, sliced onion and other seasonings. Cover and let cook in a moderate oven until done, about one hour. To serve, remove the steak to a hot platter and thicken the remaining liquid for a spicy sauce.

PAPRIKA SCHNITZEL

Veal shoulder chops of steaks
4 slices bacon
1 small onion
1 teaspoon paprika
1 cup sour cream
½ cup tomato sauce
Salt and pepper.

Dice the bacon very fine and fry until crisp. Brown the veal chops or steaks in the bacon drippings, then add the onion, season with paprika and salt and pepper. Stir in the sour cream and tomato sauce. Cover tightly and bake in a moderate oven until done, about thirty minutes.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Married Her Boss For the Luxuries He Offered Her

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The various ramifications of the "perfect secretary" controversy, as aired in this column, have given rise to many individual viewpoints, all tempered with the leaven of human nature, sometimes sacrificing and unselfish; sometimes, as exemplified today, material and grasping.

From the letter published in today's column, we can draw confirmation of the universal contention that no marriage can be successful in the true sense of the word unless husband and wife achieve mutual respect and admiration even if they cannot love.

We read the plaint of a woman, now no longer young, who regrets bittery that her "modern" philosophy erected a barrier between he and happiness—a happiness which she measured, and still measures, in terms of dollars and cents. She was the secretary; he, already married, was her boss— But read for yourself:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Being a modern woman, I believe that if an employer falls in love with his secretary and she falls in love with him, or marries him because she's ambitious, it's no one else's business. To my way of thinking, it's their own affair.

After my boss fell in love with me, his wife secured a divorce, and we were married. Later, he divorced me. It was not because our consciences hurt us, nor because of ostracism by our friends and his business associates; we were "modern."

NO ROMANCE

His first wife accepted the very handsome settlement made on her, and as far as I could see was glad to be free. For, apart from his worldly success, the boss was not the type a girl would write poetry about in her leisure hours.

He was a rich, self-made man, who had outgrown his first wife. Social ambitions hit him hard, and he wanted some one who would make him proud. He had had no children by his first marriage, and he wanted a family.

He was 45 years old and was keen to realize all the dreams he had had when he was 20. He had started his career in New York as a shoe clerk.

This was where I failed. I had taken the boss and I should have accepted with smiles all those things which got on my nerves and nearly set me crazy, as I was perfectly aware of his crudities before I married him. Although I knew he wanted a family more than anything else in the world, I didn't want children and I found my amusement with young men of my own age, whom I had known before I married.

A STUPID ERROR

This was short-sighted. I see that now, when, instead of riding in my own limousine, I am eking out a hall-bedroom existence, and am no longer young and pretty.

But don't blame me for being hard-boiled. I began life in an orphanage, and there is no better school in the world to learn the game of how to get on quickly. An orphan soon learns, if the matron, nurse or one of the ladies on the board takes a fancy to her, she'll have an easier time than if she's the butt of managerial tempers and grouches. And do these ladies have their tantrums? I'll say they do!

So, before I shed my milk teeth, I discovered that the way to get on was to cling to the higher-ups. My unknown parents endowed me with plenty of good looks, and worldly wisdom seemed to come natural. When one of the board of managers took a fancy to me, invited me to her place in the country, and paid my expenses at a business college, I felt I knew something about the art of getting on.

To make a long story short, the boss' weakness for a good-looking girl was my opportunity. After three years in which I used all the philosophies picked up in my alma mater—the orphanage—I became Mrs. Boss.

I was so sure of myself that I forgot to play the game. I let my husband see that I didn't care about him, and I wouldn't have any children. I played with a jazzy crowd and drank a good deal. The boss got the divorce this time.

Sometimes I think my unknown mother must have put a certain hardness into my soul before I was born. I've never really cared for anyone in my life.

You have asked for human documents. Well, lady, here's mine. Let it stand as a warning to other young women.

JUNE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 24, a stenographer, as good looking as the average, but I just cannot find a man willing to show the slightest interest in me. All my girl friends are married, or about to be. So I now apply to you as a last resort.

If there is anything I sincerely do not want is to remain an old maid.

Please give me your "husband recipe" and I assure you I shall follow it to the letter.

DESPERATE.

DEAR YOUNG FRIEND:

If you were a sportsman and wanted to catch trout, you would go where trout were. That homesimile applies to husband seeking. A girl has to do the "fishing" up to a certain point. After that, when the man has swallowed the "bait," you can trust him to do the rest.

Your church has young people's organizations. Join one, by all means. And resolve to "put the best foot forward" when a young man shows signs of wanting to ask you.

The Y. W. C. A., with its numerous social activities, offers good matrimonial opportunities. The "Y" dances have a "home" atmosphere and you will always have a chance to meet a half-dozen boys in the course of an evening.

Then there is the open-air dance hall. Personally, I see no harm in a girl's going there with two or three other girls. Before the finale, you will probably receive offers of three or four "rides home." But if you are wise, you'll postpone accepting until you've seen the young man at least five or six times. Even then it is wise to persuade him to call at your home.

Evening schools have paved the way for thousands of marriages. In the classroom you are bound to meet scores of ambitious young men. Very likely some of them will walk home with you, and then "drop around" on Sunday. Your studies will provide a mutual interest, always a good start for any courtship.

Husband hunting, women's oldest task, is not half so difficult as it seems. The important thing is to be where potential husbands are. Don't sit at home behind drawn shades and expect man to find you and marry you.

That may sound pretty in movies and novels, but it doesn't happen in real life. Wise young women go out, meet men, and nine times out of ten marry them.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a stenographer, 25 years of age. My $25 a week salary goes almost entirely for clothes. Honestly, I've gone without eating to pay for coats and dresses I really couldn't afford. But all in vain. Girls, plainer than I and not nearly so well dressed, are marrying the eligible men while I seem destined for a reserved seat in Old Maids' Paradise.

Clothes make the man, they say. Doesn't the same apply to woman?

JANE V. T.

MY DEAR JANE:

There is such a thing as frightening men away by spending too much money on clothes. The man with the $2000 income is liable to shy away from the young woman who wears a $500 coat and $5 stockings.

Every man realizes marriage will necessitate sacrifices on his part. These he gladly makes, providing they are within reason. Yet, no man wants a wife whose clothes bill would take more than half of what he earns.

You could spend less than five dollars a week on coats, dresses and hats and still look just as well as the average young woman. I can't see much sense in buying a fur coat and then dieting down to skeleton lines to pay for it.

It would be more advantageous to use a little of this money for books and school courses. It is as important to develop your mind and character as it is to cover your body with fine feathers and fabrics.

And after all, the man who becomes your husband will marry YOU, not the sable coat you wear.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Lottery Trial---It's Another Gamble

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Federal court had to postpone lottery trial when it couldn't find a jury of 12 men who had never played a sweepstake.

Which proves that hope springs eternal in the human vest at two dollars per button.

They got 11 men who said they never gambled, but the 12th man is still honest.

The court wouldn't have any trouble in getting a jury that never won anything unless you include bribes as legitimate stakes.

Another panel of 100 will be drawn this week. You are eligible if you didn't have a five riding on Jesse Owens, Man o' War or Hoover's G-Men.

Beauty

Writer, Hollywood Bound, Describes Plane Makeup

By DONNA GRACE

WE ARE SUCH a long way from the earth as we fly up here above the floor of fleecy white clouds that one might be expected to let the thoughts, too, soar far beyond the realm of ordinary interests.

We thought of reaching some great height in poetry and imagination in this new thrill of magic transportation, and it was most inspiring, but we are going to let you experience your own kind of thrills and inspirations on such heights and tell you something of our fellow passengers.

The modern equipment of these great luxury passenger planes is so perfect, it is easy when one is not looking out, to think of them as club rooms or modern trains.

We were intensely interested in the make-up of the women and girls and their method of keeping it nice and refreshed throughout the whole day. The air at this height is likely to make the skin a bit dry, so we advise a facial massage with plenty of good tissue cream the day before, altho this is necessary only for those whose skin is naturally dry.

MAKE-UP FOUNDATION

It is always advisable to use a good make-up foundation when one makes up for the day, and when there is a strong light such as we have aloft, select a rather dark or deep skin shade. The grease paints or fine cream stage make-up about No. 2 is a good medium shade for anyone, altho there are some darker tones that are very nice, too.

First cleanse the face, neck, arms and hands thoroughly with your cleansing cream or an astringent, if the skin is oily. Then apply the cream foundation by blending it smoothly into the skin. Do not use too much. You will find it takes only a little to cover the whole surface satisfactorily, but it must be smoothed so there will be no streaks or patches.

Then use a light application of paste or cream rouge blended carefully rather high on the cheeks. Then the powder is applied, and we like to use two shades, a light one, and over that a darker tone. A little powder brush will be a help in distributing it evenly and removing the surplus.

LIPSTICK

The lips are first done very lightly, but follow the contour carefully. Then pat on some powder to set the color. Apply more to fill them out, and when finished, press a tissue between them to remove some of the color.

Always do the eye make-up very delicately for the strong daylight, and be sure the hair is well-groomed and sprayed lightly with brilliantine.

You will remove your hat so we advise you to wear a fine, invisible cap net and use a few hair pins to keep your hair neat and smart.

Carry a large light-weight handbag so you will have some tissues and small containers of your make-up to keep it renewed from time to time.

Distressing Head Noises

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

MANY REQUESTS come to me asking for information about head noises.

[illegible] is not to be wondered at, because this sympton is one of the most common afflictions of middle age. It may occur in younger individuals who have had some infection or other disturbances of the ear.

Head noises, "tinnitus," as it is spoken of medically, is always a distressing symptom. This noise is described in various way by different sufferers. Some describe it as a continuous rumbling noise. Others compare it to the ringing of bells, the rushing of a stream, the rolling of the ocean, to a musicale note, the hissing of a steam kettle or the chirp of a cricket.

Sometimes the noise is so pronounced and persistent as to prevent sleep and rest. It may be mild in its nature and disappear within a short time. I have seen victims of this symptom become so upset by the noise as actually to appear on the verge of mental disturbance.

OLD SUPERSTITION

The ancients believed that head noises were caused by evil spirits located within the skull. Not many centuries ago our forefathers believed in this superstitition. They advised surgical and other methods of control that today are considered useless and unscientific.

Sometimes tinnitus can be traced to some deformity, irritation or inflammation within the inner ear. Enlarged or diseased tonsils is another possible cause. Dried or impacted ear wax, polyps, tumors and foreign bodies in the canal of the ear are other causes of head noises.

At times the disturbance can be traced to some constitutional hardening of the blood vessels, disorder. High blood pressure, auto-intoxication, faulty diet and inadequate hours of rest and sleep are contributing factors.

Relief can only be obtained when causative factors are corrected. This requires a complete physical examination and careful inspection of the nose, throat and ears. Avoid the use of home remedies and never rely upon suggestions for treatment made by some well-meaning friend.

YOUTH SEIZED AFTER CHASE DOWNTOWN

A "holdup" scare threw the banking section of Postoffice Square into an uproar today when three patrolmen chased an alleged bag snatcher through the district for 15 minutes before capturing him when he sought refuge in the Postoffice building.

The man gave his name as Anthony De Lorenzo, 23, of Ashley street, East Boston.

Patrolman Joseph Condrick of the Milk street station said he saw a man reach his arm through a parked car window and then walk away with a suitcase.

Condrick shouted and the man broke into a run up Franklin street. Patrolman Condrick blew his whistle shrilly and two other patrolmen on traffic duty took up the chase.

The runner, seeing the officers gaining on him, hurled the suitcase into the street and picked up speed.

Pedestrians scuttled to shelter as the officers, shouting to the fleeing youth to halt, drew their revolvers.

After zig-zagging through the crowds in Postoffice square like a half-back in a broken field, the fleeing man finally darted into the postoffice. An officer collared him as he made for the rear exit.

At the Milk street station he trembled as he was being booked and expressed thanks he was still alive.

"I thought they'd let me have it any minute," he told the booking clerk.

Hewitt Sterility Trial on Today

San Francisco, Aug. 10 (INS)—Battle lines were drawn today for the first major engagement in the sensational fight of Ann Cooper Hewitt, 21-year-old heiress to millions, against those she claimed robbed her of the right to motherhood.

Ann was ready to take the witness stand against Drs. Tilton E. Tillman and Samuel G. Boyd and tell her story of the operation in which she charges they sterilized her without her consent and as part of a sinister conspiracy hatched by her mother.

After many delays, prosecutors and defense attorneys announced they were prepared to proceed this week with the trial of the two doctors, who face criminal charges of mayhem.

Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt, the much-married socialite mother whom Ann accuses of having her sterilized in a plot to gain complete possession of a $10,000,000 trust fund, will not be in the courtroom. Mrs. Hewitt, similarly charged with the doctors, has declared she will fight extradition to California from New Jersey.

Smuggle Sweeps Tickets to U. S.

The smuggling of sweepstakes tickets into the United States today sent federal agents in a concentrated drive against steamers, trains and automobiles entering this country from Canada.

Government agents revealed that activity on the part of postal authorities to seize hundreds of thousands of tickets in the mail has forced operators in Canada to resort to smuggling.

Headaches
Come from Constipation

Most headaches are due to poisons formed in the waste matter and absorbed by the blood. Slowly but surely these poisons undermine your health. Get rid of constipation and your headaches will disappear.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is so safe, so gentle and so natural in its action.

Nujol makes up for a deficiency of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular bowel movements without griping.

Just try Nujol regularly for the next month and see if you don't feel better than you ever suspected you could.

Ask your druggist for Nujol.

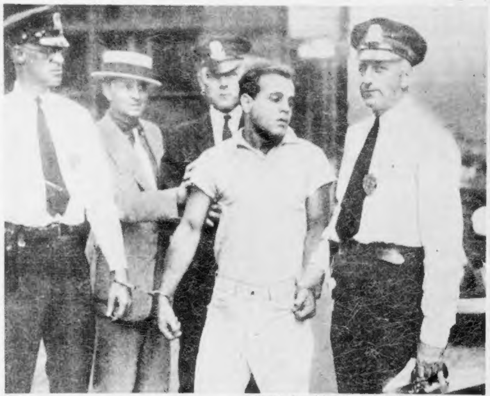
Caught in Chase After Bag-Grabbing



(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

A downtown bag-snatching chase attracted a large crowd in streets adjacent to Postoffice square. Cries of "Stop thief!" started things. A bystander saw an arm go into an automobile and a man run with small suitcase. The prisoner is Anthony de Lorenzo of East Boston. Two officers in the chase were Patrolman Ernest Love, handcuffed to the prisoner, and Patrolman Michael J. Heany, holding stolen case.

DIONNE BURIAL ON WEDNESDAY

Republicans and Democrats joined today in paying tribute to Oscar U. Dionne, candidate for the Republican nomination for state auditor, who died as he prepared to address a rally at Littleton, Saturday.

At the same time it was announced that funeral services would be held at his home in Wood street, New Bedford, Wednesday morning, to be followed by a solemn high mass of requiem at St. Joseph's Church. Burial is to be in Sacred Heart Cemetery, New Bedford.

John W. Haigis, Republican candidate for Governor, is to head a throng of dignitaries of both parties which will attend the funeral. Republican candidates for state office in the coming election are expected to serve as honorary bearers.

Members of the legal profession, or fellow members of the New Bedford American Legion post, are expected to serve as bearers.

Rallies of both Republican and Democratic parties in different sections of the state yesterday were devoted to eulogizing Dionne. Politics were forgotten as speakers spent all their time in paying tribute to his services to city and state.

His place on the ticket is expected to be filled tomorrow by the Republican state committee.

At Greenfield, last night, William C. Hill, spokesman for the committee, declared that unless a candidate filed the necessary 1000 signatures before tomorrow's deadline, the committee would name a successor.

BANDIT WON'T ARGUE

Gun His Only Logic---Gets $60

Clement Durgin, Somerville storekeeper, always tries to be reasonable—even with a holdup man.

But he learned today that it's difficult to argue with the logic of a gun muzzle pressed against your belt buckle.

Durgin did his best, however.

He kept his wits about him when a blond bandit, gun in hand, stepped into his Washington street, Somerville, shop.

"This is a stick-up, buddy," said the visitor. "Let's have the dough!"

Durgin tried to compromise.

"I've got some bills to pay," he explained. "And I need what little cash I've got. Look, I'll give you $10 and we'll forget that this happened."

"Cut the chatter and hand over the roll," snapped the gunman.

"I'll give you $20," temporized Durgin.

The bandit's answer was to jam the revolver into the storekeeper's midriff. He backed Durgin into a rear room, took $60 from his pockets, then tied him hand and foot, with six short pieces of rope, apparently carried for the purpose.

Finally Durgin's businesslike caller gagged him with a soiled dustcloth.

"Just a feller you couldn't talk sense to," Durgin told police two hours later.

ONCE MORE on the climb. For the second time in his career, Jack Sharkey starts up rung by rung to the heavyweight championship. If he can beat Joe Louis a week from tomorrow night in New York he will have either Schmeling or Braddock to meet for the title. And maybe he can do it. He thinks so, at any rate.

Cubs Regain League Lead

By Associated Press

[illegible] Cubs [illegible]

Charlie Grimm's Chicago Champs have regained their [illegible] lead [illegible]. They've taken over the National League lead [illegible] And with their great pitching staff [illegible] the strongest in the loop they are once again definitely the club to beat in the stretch drive.

Of course the Giants and Cards can do [illegible] of damage [illegible] the [illegible] collapsed once [illegible] after making a pass at the lead and the [illegible] pitching [illegible] the [illegible] of the Cubs [illegible] the week end [illegible] that they're [illegible] but any outfit that can [illegible] 56 hits in four games as they have done [illegible] cannot be classed exactly as a pitcher's pushover.

They wound up their week end bombardment yesterday with a 29-hit assault against the Pirates to take both ends of a double header 10—1 and 6—2, and move back into the first place they gave up last week because of weak hitting.

The Cardinals were knocked out of the lead by a tremendous hitting attack on the part of the Cincinnati Reds who [illegible] 40 safe [illegible] over the [illegible] to turn in a twin win 13—2 and 12—5.

"It would be foolish for me to stand in Jesse's way," Snyder said. "He is practically at the height of his fame now. Nothing that he could do in his remaining year of college competition would lift him to a higher peak in the athletic world than he now enjoys.

"Under the circumstances, I believe he is justified in accepting offers to turn professional as long as they are the right kind. He has a good chance to make from $75,000 to $100,000. I'd be glad to see him do it."

Thus Far No Summer Slump Has Occurred

Trade, Industrial Facts Are Quite Cheerful; High-Ups Cautious

By B. C. FORBES

B. C. Forbes

Business steams ahead. No mid-summer recession has yet become manifest, and, judging by events, none is expected. Indeed, popular optimism is on parade.

Nevertheless, cautionary action is widespread among the most influential circles, despite favorable trade, industrial, railway, utility, mining and security developments, as well as political indications encouraging to men of affairs, the vast majority of whom do not favor another four years of the New Deal.

August, which traditionally brings dog days, lassitude, slowing-down, has thus far brought distinctly cheerful figures and facts from almost every direction.

For example:

Security quotations have resumed their advance with rails reaching heights not touched in the last five years.

Commodity prices, though influenced from day to day by weather reports, are very satisfactory to growers whose crops have not been destroyed.

Cotton prospects have been greatly brightened by the successful unloading of government-owned surpluses heretofore overhanging the market.

Weekly railway car loadings, at 747,551, are the best since 1931. Most roads are proving able to retain, in the form of net earnings, a generous proportion of the gross increase.

Power consumption is booming, and nearly all utility companies, even in face of lowered rates, record substantially higher profits than a year ago.

Another advance in scrap steel prices reflects continued heavy demand. While steel output is called only 71½ per cent of theoretical capacity, it is admitted that 100 per cent production could not possibly be achieved because of obsolescence of plants during the last half-dozen years.

Leading motor manufacturers report amazing results. Chevrolet's retail sales, 111,200 vehicles, during last month, constitute the maximum ever reached in July. Ford announces that domestic sales of cars and trucks in July totaled more than 100,000 for the fourth consecutive month. Chrysler is breaking records. Hudson's July sales were the best for any July since 1929.

The Bell System had more calls for the installation of new telephones than in any July since 1923.

Retail trade reports from almost every point are glowing. Montgomery Ward has sold more this year than ever before.

Dun and Bradstreet's finds wholesale buying close to 1929's record-breaking volume in many centers.

Cotton mills are enjoying contra-seasonal gains.

The South, stimulated by "a billion-dollar cotton year," proclaims a degree of prosperity not enjoyed since the boom.

The copper industry has marked up export quotations and domestically is doing very well.

All this is reflected by numerous dividend increases, although the looming tax on undistributed earnings is causing some directorates to disburse to stockholders more than they normally would.

Also by appreciable expansion of employment, by a mostly upward trend in wages and by other new advantages to workers.

Another result has been distinct growth in optimism—at least in all but top-notch circles.

Predictions of very gratifying third-quarter results are common.

But many heads of corporations refuse to be swept off their feet; they prefer to keep fairly close to shore until a distinctly more definite line can be obtained on how the November voting is likely to go.

Moreover, threatened labor warfare is also a sobering influence.

Instead of indulging in predictions, one way on the other, this writer would rather have readers draw their own predictions from the recorded facts.

One thought worth keeping in mind is that the government is still spending twice its income, a fact which bodes no good for taxpayers, individual or corporate.

FACTORY SALES Of Autos Up

More motor vehicles were shipped from factories of Automobile Manufacturers Association members last month than in any previous July with the single exception of July, 1928, preliminary factory sales report released by the association discloses.

The association includes all major producers, excepting Ford. Factory sales of association members for July were estimated at 339,755 cars and trucks—33 per cent over the same month last year but 7 per cent under 1928.

WARNS Against False REVIVAL

G. M. INCOME BOOSTED

Special to American Newspapers, Inc.

New York, Aug. 10 — Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, in his report to stockholders made public today, warns against an artificial revival of business stimulated by government spending.

Revealing enormous gains in General Motors sales and earnings for the first six months of 1936, Mr. Sloan nevertheless declared the whole future of business is "clouded" by the government's continued deficits and recklessness with the taxpayer's money.

He listed four "fundamental and constructive" reasons for the general increase in business but said a fifth and bad reason was this:

"Purchasing power has been stimulated through government expenditures."

And of this he said:

"The fifth influence is entirely artificial—a highly undesirable one."

He added:

"Constructive enterprise sponsored by private initiative must be substituted for boondoggling, actuated by political considerations and paid for not only by the taxpayer, but by every individual consuming goods and using services.

"Every day of delay simply means an added burden carried into tomorrow and the future."

* * *

Discussing his own company, he revealed the increase in earnings and dollar volume of business in the June quarter was due not only to expanding volume of automotive business, but also to increased profits from its investments in various subsidiaries not consolidated.

Mr. Sloan said the company's investments in this group approximate $250,000,000 and that operations for the first half of 1936 resulted in the highest earnings in their history.

The report confirmed a net income for the June quarter equivalent to $2 a share, compared with $1.17 a year ago.

He continued:

"The important degree of recovery reached by the automotive industry is evidenced by the fact that if the present trend continues, 1936 is likely to approach 85 per cent of the previous maximum established in 1929."

Mr. Sloan then listed the four reasons he believes sound and constructive. They are:

1. There was a sharp depletion in the inventory of unused automotive miles represented by cars and trucks in use, as result of the subnormal production of the depression years. Thus there is necessitated increased production to reach normal. Applicable to the United States, the trend toward normal has been accelerated by the fact that the motor car still holds, next to food, shelter and clothing, a preferred position in relation to the consumers' purchasing power.

2. The opportunity of the motor car and truck to serve the community, both from the social as well as economic standpoint, is continually broadening. This means a trend of increasing use and hence added production.

3. Technological progress was maintained and accelerated during the period of the depression, resulting in more attractive, more efficient, better all-around merchandise.

4. World recovery from the depression continues to make important progress. This is true not only within the United States, but is more importantly true outside the United States. As a matter of fact 17 of the 23 most important countries in the world have enjoyed a greater recovery than that of the United States.

Turning again to a discussion of government spending Mr. Sloan said:

"Irrespective of how great the resources of any nation may be, it is not different, fundamentally, from that of any individual within the nation.

"It cannot continue indefinitely to spend more than it collects. It cannot continue indefinitely to keep lowering the ceiling of opportunity for constructive enterprise through the influence of continually increasing indebtedness. And that is just what is being done at present.

"The time is rapidly approaching when the facts must be recognized and faced courageously."

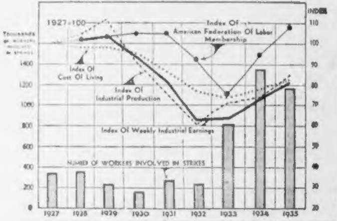
Sugar Meltings

Sugar melt of 13 United States refiners from January 1 to August 1 totaled 2,590,000 long tons, against 2,560,000 in the like 1935 period. Deliveries for the same period amounted to 2,280,000 long tons, against 2,325,000 a year ago.

Factors Behind Strikes



ECONOMIC FACTORS THAT INFLUENCE STRIKES AND NUMBER OF WORKERS INVOLVED

Number of Workers Involved

Here is a chart that brings together four important economic factors that have a large influence on the number of strikes that occur in the United States.

During the depression, when business was at its low point, strikes as measured by the number of workers involved were relatively few. Both labor and industry forgot their differences temporarily and concentrated their efforts on getting out of the depression.

The upturn in business beginning in 1933 was followed by an increase in strikes, caused by labor's demand for higher wages, shorter hours and union recognition.

Curb Market Is Dull Affair

New York, Aug. 10 (AP)—While a few sections of the curb list moved hesitantly today, some of the utilities and oils were able to extend the sharp gains of last week.

Certain of the fast movers of the recent rise were reactionary under realizing. Sherwin Williams was one, sliding back 1⅛ points in early trading.

Electric Bond & Share, Northern States Power "A" and International Petroleum were fairly prominent in the rising group, showing fractional improvement. Other gainers included Aluminum Co. of America, Sunshine Mining and Wayne Pump.

Reed Roller Bit, an inactive issue, picked up 1, while Southern New England Telephone showed a rise of 12½ over the previous transaction on an odd-lot trade.

FOUR REASONS

Why Stock Prices Are Rising

Four powerful forces are operating to lift stock prices at the present time, says the United Business Service in its current report. These are:

1—Momentum of basic business recovery — upward trend of corporate earnings.

2—Pressure of the new tax legislation, causing liberalization of dividend policies.

4—High level of bond prices and low interest rates.

The Service considers that the rising trend of profits is the chief reason why stocks are advancing. Replacement of worn out and obsolete equipment is causing increased business in the capital goods industry. Higher consumer purchasing power is causing excellent sales results.

Higher dividend disbursements, made possible through increased earnings, are stimulated by the new tax on undistributed profits. This also improves demand for equities.

Large-scale government expenditures are enhancing stock values in many ways. The liberal spending program is causing some people to buy stocks as a hedge against the possibility of a government credit collapse. In business channels the heavy government disbursements and loans are resulting in larger sales volumes.

A possible fifth lifting force for stocks is the favorable situation in the money market. Yields are abnormally low, and the amount of funds seeking investment is large.

NATURAL "GAS" Output Increases

The Bureau of Mines announced that daily average production of natural gasoline increased 67,000 gallons in June, registering a daily average of 4,504,000, against 4,437,000 in May. This brings production for the first six months to 839,328,000 gallons, or more than 7 per cent greater than the 1935 period.

Stocks also continued to gain, increasing from 237,888,000 gallons on hand at the first of the month to 244,818,000 June 30. The major part of this increase was recorded in stocks at refineries.

—VOTE AMERICAN—

July Sales Ahead

Retail sales of Hudson and Terraplane cars in this country during July totaled 10,267 units, against 7079 in July, 1935, an increase of 45 per cent, and the largest for this month since 1929.

25 Years Ago

New York, Aug. 10 (INS)—John W. ("Bet a Million") Gates, financier, died in Paris.

U. S. crop report showed grain yield nearly a billion bushels under 1910.

Atchison proposed $100,000,000 increase in common stock.

Sidelights Of Wall Street

New York, Aug. 10 — The one armed paper-hanger with the itch will have nothing on the railroads in the next six months when it comes to being busy.

The Interstate Commerce Commission's indication that the $100,000,000 annual freight surcharges will be discontinued at the year's end leaves the railroads with a rate structure comparable to a jig-saw puzzle with the important pieces missing.

Here and there, during the period that the surcharges were in force, the railroads granted relief to certain types of freight from the added rate burden. But instead of eliminating or lowering the surcharge on such commodities, they reduced the basic rates. Such relief was usually granted in cases where shippers constituted a big enough minority to kick up an I. C. C. protest. Therefore, when the surcharges are eliminated on Dec. 31 next, the railroads are going to find themselves with the basic rates on many commodities far under the level before the surcharges went into effect. The big chiefs say the only way the rate structure can be rebuilt is to file new higher tariffs on individual commodities. It is indicated the roads will seek new higher rates on all individual commodities in an effort to lift rates to a level equal to the old basic rates plus the dying surcharges. Some job. There are thousands and thousands of freight rate classifications, and each one will have to be treated individually.

Pere Marquette Traffic Holds

Traffic of Pere Marquette Railway, a barometer of industrial activity in Michigan, and particularly of automotive activity at Flint and Detroit, is holding recent new gains. Freight loadings currently are running better than 22 per cent above last year, and for July, freight volume was around 23 per cent above a year ago. For the year to date, cumulative loadings are 13 per cent above the like 1935 period. The Pere Marquette earned $1.27 on common stock in the first half of 1936, against a deficit of 57 cents on common in the first half of 1935.

Steamer Lines Share Recovery

Latest of the steamship systems to report for the first half of the year, American-Hawaiian shows substantial earnings improvement for this year, especially in the last few months. Such favorable reports by other steamship lines are not lacking, indicating distinct recovery in ocean-going and coastal trade, both in passengers and in freight. American-Hawaiian's per share net for the six months almost equalled the company's full year dividend rate of $1 a share. The line will shortly place in operation four three-deck freighters recently purchased, somewhat larger than the company's present "Pennsylvanian" class.

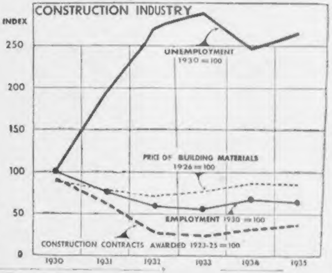
The Black Diamond Steamship Corporation has just announced a building program which will include three cargo liners for its New York-Rotterdam service.

—VOTE AMERICAN—

Bar Gold

London, Aug. 10 (AP)—Bar gold advanced 1½ pence to 138s 5½d. (Sterling price equivalent to $34.81.)

Building Still Behind



Steel Operations Hold at 71 P. C.

Under sustained demand for the heavier finished materials and with backlogs in some lines becoming augmented, steel works' operations last week remained unchanged at 71½ per cent, says "Steel."

As scrap prices went higher, some mills showed concern over a possible shortage. Increases in practically all districts raised "Steel's" index 63 cents to $14.25. The composite is now at the highest point since the last week in April when it was $14.33.

A sharp decline of 14,166 units put automobile production for the week at 81,804, but last year at the same time it was only 48,067 units. Some of the large body plants have started pressing die makers for earliest possible deliveries on new die work.

Small Progress Made

Recovery in the construction industry although pronounced for the past two years has made but small progress toward the level occupied in 1930 at the beginning of the depression.

Building material prices in 1935 were about the same as in 1930, but construction contracts awarded were still 60 per cent under.

The employment situation still remains an acute problem. The index of employment and unemployment based on the estimates of the Cleveland Trust Co. shows a slight drop in employment for 1935 and a surprisingly large increase in unemployment.

WEEK-END REVIEW

Industrial Production Gains

New York, Aug. 10—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Company, of New York, currently comments as follows:

"Greater than expected activity caused industrial production in July to reach the best level since the recovery movement got under way. In fact, the Standard Statistics Company index of industrial activity for last month of 87.9 (corrected for seasonal variation, 1926 equals 100) was the highest since June of 1930.

"The contra-seasonal improvement in July was due almost entirely to expanding activity in the capital goods industries. Indeed, with the exception of a moderate slackening in the first two months of this year, the producers' goods trades have been expanding schedules without interruption since June, 1935.

"Despite the fact that August normally is one of the dullest months of the year from the standpoint of industrial production, present indications are that output in the current month will show no more than moderate contraction, after making allowance for seasonal factors, from the abnormally high July levels.

"The index of industrial production for August is preliminarily estimated at 83.3, the best figure for any August since 1929."

Wall St. Hears

New York, Aug. 10 (INS)—That Loew's, Inc. (LW), probably will earn around $5.50 a common share in the fiscal year ending Aug. 31.

That the recently established 80-cent annual dividend of Barnsdall Oil (BDL) is well assured.

That American Brake Shoe (ABK) earnings are running at an annual rate of close to $3 a share.

WEALTH Makers VIEWED

SCIENCE CREATES

(Samuel Crowther, well known business commentator, today acts as guest columnist for Merryle Stanley Rukeyser who is on vacation. Tomorrow, Ralph Budd, president, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, will write the column.)

By SAMUEL CROWTHER

Copyright, 1936, Universal Service

New York, Aug. 10—It is not difficult to marshal the evidence that, although laws may destroy, the advance of human progress is achieved only through the application of science and invention.

For instance, the eight-hour day is not the result of law. The laws came only after machinery had made it possible to earn a living in eight hours of work. It is likewise with women's suffrage. Women were not much interested in voting until a whole line of inventions, one by one, made it possible for the average woman to emerge from her kitchen.

We have had three years of incessant law-making. The net result is known to everyone. And that is why the farm chemurgic movement is in many ways the most significant one in the country. It is a "create wealth" movement by scientists instead of a "share the wealth" movement promoted by politicians.

* * *

Francis P. Garvan, who, as head of the Chemical Foundation, and as an individual, has done more than any other man to make ours the leading nation of the world in chemistry, has founded the movement to take chemical research into agriculture, and recently in an address he defined the aims:

"During the period of this depression our chemical industries have been the most successful in growth and in profit to themselves and to the country; also, from 1922, they show a steady improvement in products at annually decreasing prices. The secret of that success has been the employment of the scientific habit of thought; not only by their employed scientists, but by their boards of directors, most of whom are trained scientists themselves. That success, at least the financial part of it, has focussed the interest of the country and of all other industries.

"As a result, chemical research is now whole-heartedly adopted in the oil, paint, steel, textile and many other businesses, and we hope that research is expressing itself in scientific habit of thought on the boards of directors of those companies. If it has not, it will in time.

"Within 20 years in this country it is apparent that every business will be controlled by chemistry and its allied sciences. And, when I speak hereafter of chemistry, I do not mean to speak narrowly; I mean, physics, biology—all of the allied sciences, because they will work together in the solution and production of each and every product. Within 20 years, I say, it is apparent that every business will be controlled by chemistry and its allied sciences, for, after all, practically all business is the transformation of matter, and that is the master definition of chemistry.

"The dollar success of the chemical industry has not only attracted the attention of all industry, but its development has had a further effect in spreading scientific habit of thought because the chemical industries are mainly service industries.

"We do not sell to the man on the street, but our products are sold to each and every other industry in the country, and the salesmen have to be trained chemists themselves, and their sales depend upon going into other industries, showing them their failings or their needs, and inducing them not only to buy their products, but to accept the scientific method of thought in the use of those products; so that we become the spreaders of the scientific habit of thought."

Mr. Garvan continued:

"And, as the oil industry or the paint industry or the steel industry goes scientific, they, in turn, go out and sell the scientific habit of thought, so that I believe this is one of the most helpful influences in the country that we are spreading—scientific habit of thought.

"In this capacity, I repeat, we come to you to help you in your endeavors to solve the farm problem. We bring to you not only our accomplished science, but, more valuable still, we hope here to extend the advance of the scientific habit of thought for the solution of your farm problems, and hence the solution of our great national problems of farm depression, national unemployment and distress."

STOCK PROSPECTS

Optimism REACHES New Peak

By BROADAN WALL
Universal Service

Optimism increased last week to fever-pitch. Hadn't the railway stocks "confirmed" the bull market by rising to new highs on average, after the industrials previously had done so? And didn't the utility group average also rise to a new peak, further confirming that the bull market is off on another lap?

Optimism became enthusiasm as the week closed. It was repetitious of the shadowless days "before the depression." The market reflected broad faith that nothing can stop the revival in business, in profits and accompanying increased dividends.

That explains perhaps why people are willing to buy at 20, 25 and 30 times the reported per-share profits. Since profits are to grow, why shouldn't they be discounted? Furthermore, the new tax law forces corporations to distribute bigger and bigger dividends. Never mind the fact that every corporation needs a surplus against hard times.

The current optimism overlooks everything as usual but the cheerful facts. Pessimism, skepticism, even logic play minor roles.

SPENDING BILLIONS

The fact that the government contributes to the seeming prosperity by spending billions more than its income is also given secondary importance. All-important alone is the momentum of the advance in prices, the quick profits available in speculation, and the broad optimism building up its own assurance of longevity to the bull market.

* * *

We are witnessing typical bull market sentiment. That statistics have confirmed a decided improvement in actual business is undeniable. The problem always in a fast-moving market is how far in advance a business rise can safely be placed on expanding profits.

Because a company suddenly reports profits, is there sound reason to ignore the earlier losses, or the small profits of many years? How many stocks would have a reasonable evaluation at today's prices if their price were compared with average per-share profits over the last six years? Is another "permanent plateau" of high profits expected, or is the revival now experienced another phase of the familiar valley-and-peak fluctuation of business and earnings? Is the market to value the bulk of the listed stocks on the basis of spectacular profits reported by individual corporations or a few industries? Is a yield of three per cent satisfactory on common stocks, four per cent, five per cent, or are stocks expected to yield more than bonds for instance? Furthermore, are yields to be measured on dividends which obviously are increased mainly under compulsion of the tax threat?

COPPERS Are Market FEATURE

SOME REACH NEW HIGHS

New York, Aug. 10 — Coppers put on a burst of speed in the stock market today, some of them whirling up to new highs while the rest of the market recovered somewhat from early irregularity.

Demand for the metal issues was said in Wall Street to have been whipped up by rising copper prices abroad as the result of feverish buying, much of it for armament purposes.

Anaconda and Kennecott, both thrusting up to new highs, were among the leaders of the copper group which netted gains of fractions to around a point. Others moving higher were Andes and Phelps Dodge.

The market got away to a steady start, slipped and then recovered to show upturns of fractions to a point or so. Rises included Bethlehem Steel, Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, International Harvester, American Can, Consolidated Edison, American Telephone, General Electric, Union Pacific and Northern Pacific.

Pullman Up

Pullman, Case and Westinghouse jumped more than 2 points on moderate turnover.

Allied Chemical, a fast-stepping issue last week, bumped into profit-taking and gave up 2 points or so.

Alcohols scoring gains of fractions to a point or so included Distillers Corp-Seagrams, Schenley, National Distillers and U. S. Industrial Alcohol.

Cotton canceled part of its early losses of about $1.50 a bale on selling prompted by Saturday's bearish crop report. Grains were lower. Gains predominated in an irregular bond market. Foreign currencies were mixed.

U. S. Steel seemed to pay comparatively little attention to the corporation's report showing shipments of finished steel products up 84,786 tons in July to 950,851. The July total was surpassed twice this year, in May and April.

Cheerful news from the steel industry helped brighten the Wall Street horizon as trading opened.

Word from leading centers stressed sustained demand for heavier finished steels and some expansion of backlogs.

"Operations of farm implement and tractor plans have fallen off, but not to the degree many manufacturers expected," the magazine "Steel" said.

"Midsummer production compares favorably with 1929 despite the adverse effect of the drouth. Some manufacturers are considering starting production of spring tools earlier in the fall than usual," the review said.

Higher profits for Phillips Petroleum spurred the week's earnings ticker. The company's net for the first six months equaled $1.77 a share compared with $1.21 for the like period of 1935.

MORE BUSINESS For Mesta Machine

Unfilled orders on the books of Mesta Machine Co. at the beginning of August amounted to more than $10,500,000, with considerable business still in sight due to plans here and abroad for additional machinery for steel plants.

Mesta is working 24 hours a day seven days a week. Customers are requesting deliveries as early as possible and officials of the company state there is no let-up in demand in sight.

TANGLE OVER

Price CONTROL LAWS Charged

By GENE ROBB

Washington, Aug. 10—Laws to control prices and laws against controlled prices are running amuck. This tangled situation presages a Congressional battle involving anti-trust statutes, old NRA codes, trade commission rules and the new Patman chain store act.

Oil men are aroused over the government's prosecution of their pricing arrangements. In their defense they will point out they have been using the same pricing policies that the NRA petroleum code required. Now they are under fire, charged with violating anti-trust laws.

Twenty-three large oil companies and 61 executives are included in the indictment obtained by the Department of Justice in a Wisconsin federal court last week.

POLITICS CHARGED

Leaders in the oil industry see two possible political motives behind the suit. One is held to be a desire on the part of the Roosevelt administration to obtain publicity from renewed attacks on big business. The other arises out of the fact that the petroleum industry has been favorably disposed toward the Republican candidate, even though Governor Landon was an independent producer, frequently at odds with the "majors."

The federal government has stepped in to stop price fixing in several industries, but complaints usually are handled through the trade commission. No criminal penalties are sought in its prosecutions, which aim only to stop the price-fixing practices.

Price maintenance cases involving rayon manufacturers, regional automobile accessory groups, confectioners and manufacturers of women's hats and dresses are pending before the commission. Turning over a price-fixing complaint to the Department of Justice is a departure from recent policy.

TOWARD PRICE CONTROL

In other quarters of the Roosevelt Administration price control is favored. A confidential report from Major George L. Berry's Committee on Industrial Co-operation—a remnant of NRA—recommends price fixing for some industries and insists intrastate business must be included in all agreements.

"Persistent efforts to revive NRA" were warned against last week by a special committee of the American Bar Association. The new Patman act, however, provides for a complicated system of "price controls." Its opponents say that neither the courts nor NRA administrators would allow the Government to go as far as it does in controlling trade practices.

PATMAN ACT CONFERENCE

The entire food industry—manufacturers, wholesalers, voluntary and corporate chains—are awaiting results of a conference about the Patman Act with Trade Commission and Justice Department officials. It will be held late this week.

What course the industry will follow in its buying and selling practices depends on the attitude and interpretations expressed by these officials.

Already the cosmetics and toilet goods manufacturers have asked the Trade Commission to help them write "fair practice" rules that will straighten out their position under the Patman law. Tire manufacturers had a similar "code of ethics" sanctioned by the commission last week.

Our Friends Across The Border

MR. ROOSEVELT, as an American President, elected by Americans, SHOULD THINK OF AMERICANS FIRST.

Our Neighbors, in Canada and elsewhere, will not honor him for doing otherwise. They know that if economic suffering is the penalty Americans must pay for friendship, THAT FRIENDSHIP WILL NOT ENDURE.

Economic suffering is the direct price we pay for trying to be TOO GOOD to our neighbors.

More and more of our people are being put out of work and are going on the dole, because of the competition in our own markets offered by "our friends across the border," our friends in Japan and in various European nations.

More and more taxes are being imposed on our people WHO STILL HAVE JOBS in order to support Americans who are on the dole because of the unwise benefits we have extended "OUR FRIENDS ACROSS THE BORDER."

It is all very well to have as many friends as possible across the border, in Europe and elsewhere. But our first consideration must be for our FRIENDS AND RELATIVES AT HOME.

The Next Congress

GOVERNOR LANDON has been assured by Chester C. Bolton, chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, of a Republican majority in the next House of Representatives.

THAT STEP IS ESSENTIAL TO THE COMPLETE ROUTING OF THE NEW DEAL.

The Supreme Court, by forcing the government to adhere to the Constitution, has saved the people from the New Deal dictatorship at the feet of which the Democratic Congress has grovelled.

A Congress with the courage to reclaim the constitutional functions that have been illegally delegated to executive authority under New Deal compulsion will be vital to the reconstruction of popular government.

Roles For Housewives

AS PURCHASING agents for the home, women are being reminded by the Made in America Club that they can play major parts in creating jobs and reducing unemployment.

Every dollar's worth of foreign merchandise they buy replaces American-made products and helps to lessen domestic payrolls.

With many of the pioneer textile mills of New England closed down because of the flood of cheap Oriental cotton cloth imports, the problem is not one to be dismissed lightly.

By scrutinizing labels and demanding goods produced by American labor, the women of the nation can do much to restore prosperity.

They Kill and Are Killed

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

This picture, taken in Madrid, shows CHILDREN AT WAR. Young boys, school boys, boys the age of YOUR boy, armed with pistols and swords, ready to kill and be killed!

It is brother against brother, brother against sister—even son against mother and father. The Red Terror thrives on blood.

Communist agents from Moscow told these boys to fight, taught them it was their duty to fight, encouraged them to die. And then the agents themselves hid.

With cheers they go out to meet the insurgents, these to-be-pitied children that fight on the Leftist side, the side which seeks to declare Spain a Soviet such as Russia.

To them it is a glorious adventure—until they fall in battle, choke on their own blood.

Who then hears them crying for Mother, Father, Brother or Sister? Not Moscow.

We in America cannot hear, but we can SEE.

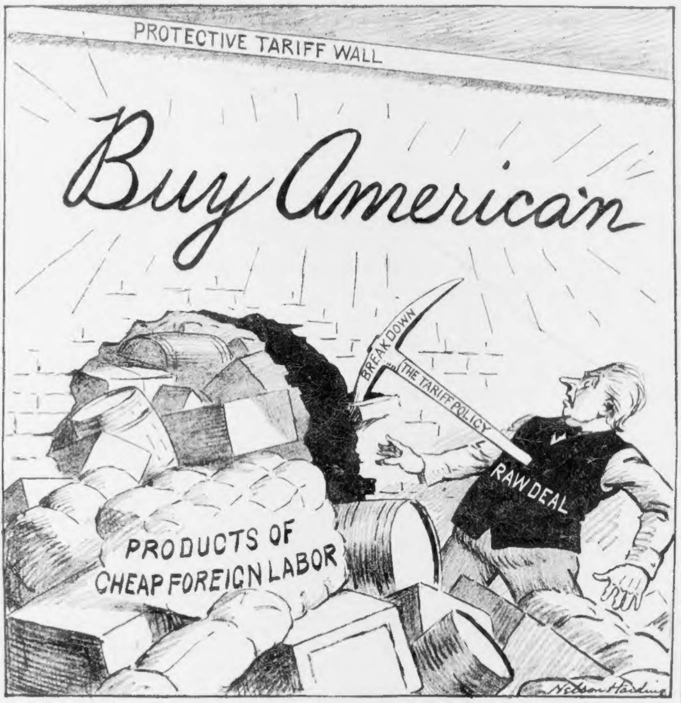
We can see what Communistic teachings have done to the children in Spain.

And we can also see what Communistic teachings may yet do to the children in America.

Learn NOW, before it may be too late, what YOUR child is being taught in school, in the "youth" society, in the literature he reads.

What is happening in Spain might happen here. Don't let it.

The Handwriting on the Wall -:- -:- By Nelson Harding



With that pick so blindly wielded
By the bungling Raw Deal theorist,
There has been destructive action
And the barrier is broken,

Letting in a flood of products
Made by low-paid foreign labor.
Let the wrecker heed that slogan
Written on the wall, and ponder!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Aug. 10—Diary: To the park with the dog, many sprawlers still asleep in the open, fearful to face another day. And talking to my friend John Lawlor, the handsome Irish starter at the Ritz, who tells me he has been at his post 25 years. And so for a snack with Arthur McKeogh in Radio City open garden.

O. O. McIntyre

Home to find a telegram from Jimmy McHugh, the song writer, and a new photographic map of Gallipolis from Dr. Charles Holzer, who is to our town what Amon Carter is to Ft. Worth.

To dinner with the photographer, Ewing Galloway, his lady Marion being off for Norway and the Salzburg festival, and we sliced deep into a two-year-old Kentucky ham, and he told me of his farm, of raising mules and of his poverty-stricken tobacco road days. And no person I've known bears such a resemblance to Lincoln.

Not many New Yorkers have maintained so successfully in the era the finesse of polished bachelordom that is George Jean Nathan's.

Past the 56-year mark, he could easily be taken for a blood in middle thirties. He has lived in the same bachelor quarters, a hop skip off the avenue, for 20 years. A front pew critic at a thousand and one first nights, he offers that perfection of polite ennui that has become something of an act.

His steadiest company at the theaters, cafes and bonton luncheon places has been the fragile Lillian Gish. But friends insist their attachment is entirely platonic. And he strengthens this by squiring many new charmers who come to town.

Nathan has a leisurely slant about letters. He has a ready market but apparently writes just enough to supply wants and no more. His latest critical chore is to review for the hemannish Esquire.

Young Cornelius Vanderbilt is reputed to have attained a celebrity status in a tour of the Orient never achieved in his own country. Japan especially hailed him with a hearty banzai. He was wined, dined and geishaed by several of the reigning peers. Except, perhaps, Roy Howard, no American has been so royally receptioned in the past few years.

Vanderbilt has been an odd figure in journalism—a rich man's son whose highest ambition is to be a rough and tumble reporter and back slapped as "Neilly" by the gang.

Somehow he just misses the camaraderie he craves. The name Vanderbilt still awes.

Personal nomination for the greatest American showman since Barnum—Major Bowes.

Ed Sullivan devotes a column now and then to the piques of Broadway, which he titles "The Feuds of Fraudway." The listings reveal many schisms among professional folk. Such as Burns and Allen and Block and Sully looking the other way when they pass. And Rudy Vallee's dislike for his rival crooner, Will Osborne.

Then there are, of course, the Broadway gossip purveyors who are in constant yanh, yanh, yanh. Even restaurateurs indulge in the aloofness. Reuben does not speak to Blue Room Dave. Dave does not speak to Lindy. And so on.

A childish street bloated with juvenile jealousies that rival the spite-fence bickerings out yonder.

Bagatelles: Constance Collier is moving her furniture from her home in London's Grosvenor square to Hollywood to remain permanently . . . Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Is a happy wifehood and motherhood a sufficient career for the 20th century bride?

Or should she force herself to reach out for wider interests . . . demand larger intellectual adventures?

Elsie Robinson

That's a strange question to hear in these emancipated times—stranger still to hear it from a father. Yet a real Dad's asking it, a dad who doesn't believe that babies and biscuits should be enough brain work for Sister. And, believe it or not, Sister is insisting that they ARE, and doesn't care a boot whether she's rated "old-fashioned" or not.

So Dad's bribing her—bribing her to use her brains! And . . . but read it yourself. Then have it out over the supper table or the office desk—or tell the world your notions through this column.

Dear Miss Robinson:

My daughter married six months ago and by all popular tests I should be a proud and contented father. Her husband is a fine young man. He has given her a charming home and she is blissfully happy. She hasn't—nor does she desire—an interest outside her home. Though formerly rated a very intelligent girl, she is completely absorbed now in her husband's career and the prospect of having children. Moreover, she protests that this is a right and natural attitude.

But I can't agree with her. Such limited interests may have been sufficient for her grandmother, who knew no others, but I feel that a modern girl—particularly one who has been given a good education—is wronging herself if she allows her outlook to become so limited. Nor can I believe she will make a very good wife or mother. In time, her limited viewpoint will be bound to affect her husband and children.

So I am offering my daughter a certain sum if she will memorize, each day, some passage from the finest books and write a short but thoughtful comment on each passage. By so doing, she will not only accumulate a substantial sum, but she will continue to develop intellectually as she did before marriage.

Some of my family consider this a most foolish plan, and my daughter herself is not too enthusiastic about it. Will you give me your reaction?

What do I think?

I think you're a great Dad and your daughter should give thanks for you hourly. The only flaw in your plan, as I see it, is that you are paying her for doing something which she should be eager to do for herself, gratis. And is a plain little moron if she doesn't!

I'm no feminist. I have no yen to see women in politics. And I also believe that every normal woman's heart centers in the home. But the 20th-century wife who refuses to have any interest outside the cradle or kitchen sink is not devoted—she's plain lazy and dumb.

Give People "Luxuries"

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Marie Antoinette has been execrated for her "Let them eat cake" observation—whether she really said it or not. But truth has many facets. One could take that callous remark, a century and a half later, and make it a plausible slogan for the pull out of the depression.

Edwin C. Hill

The only way out lies in a wider diffusion of wealth and greater spending power among masses of people. That means luxuries. The widespread use of luxuries is the measure of a civilization. Hence a small headline in the newspaper becomes pertinent: "Music and Tobacco Help End Depression."

The National Piano Manufacturers' Association reports business in the first half of 1936 greater than that of any similar period in the last 15 years. Government statistics show 1935 cigarette production at 138,656,000,000, compared with 112,724,000,000 in the previous year, a gain of 23 per cent.

With all the depressions, not only in America but in the world, where there was long continuity of government and no collapse of a civilization, there have been two curves which, in the long pull, have gone steadily upward. These have been the curves of wages and of the standard of living. The basic force of modern technology accentuates this historic trend. The deeper we get into a machine civilization, the more do we find that the centuries have ordained wisdom in "Let them eat cake."

CLEAN-CUT VICTORY

We can't use laboratory methods in studying social trends, but once in a while we find overlapping or dove-tailing civilizations which give us the long view, revealing sequences of cause and effect otherwise not observable. Here's an instance, again out of a newspaper.

The International Labor Office of The League of Nations reports, at Geneva, that moving pictures, sports motoring and the general enrichment of life due to contact with the modern world, virtually have ended narcotic addiction in the Philippine Islands. That looks like a clean-cut victory for "luxuries."

In the depth of depression years, we invoke the stern Puritan virtue and we extol austerity and self-denial. It would seem that a frank acceptance of the fact that more and more luxuries must be provided and used is at odds with our traditional morality of thrift and solvency. If we accept the word "luxury" in its loose connotation of vulgar indulgence, that, no doubt, would be true.

But, without straining, one may read a quite different meaning into the word. Early-day automobiles certainly were luxuries with all the old implications of the word. In vast areas of America and among multitudes of people, they are now necessities. There are many thousands of laborers, farmers and businessmen, away down in the lower economic stratum, who couldn't carry on for a day without this "luxury" of yesterday.

And if there is any one line of manufacturing which is helping carry us through the depression it is the automobile industry. The story of the bold, continuous output, with technical improvements every year, and a showing of brilliant management and financing, affords indisputable proof that modern technology may be reconciled with sound economics. The tale of how the automobile makers avoided debt, which is associated with the word "luxury" in the old sense, is unique and interesting. But that is another story. The main point is that here we have the luxury of a few years ago helping to pull us out of the worst hole we ever got into.

NO LONGER "LUXURIES"

One of my friends tells me of the sensation in Providence, when his grandfather, or possibly great-grandfather, installed the first complete plumbing system in his house. Neighbors came to view the miracle. There were hints that the whole business was a rather wild fling—extravagant and ostentatious—and the old gentleman's banker began taking a sharp look at his accounts. Today plumbing in a home is as essential as a roof. No one would ever think of considering it a luxury.

One could go on forever enumerating luxuries that have become necessities. Two or three decades ago, an orthodontist served mostly the rich. Today straightening children's teeth is routine even among persons of small means. As our capital goods establishment is brought to completion, consumers' goods and services spread in spite of ourselves and in spite of the lag of war.

The first 12 successful looms in England were destroyed by mobs because they displaced workingmen. Like Lot's wife, we have looked back time and again as we have gained command of new energies and furthered our conquest of Nature. But, inexorably, we are impelled, in Dryden's line, "to take the goods the gods provide you."

Man does not live by bread alone. Let him eat cake.

Blum Takes Over Bank

From the Chicago Journal of Commerce

As has been noted by other commentators, when M. Blum, the Socialist, became Premier of France he was caught between two dangerous maelstroms.

On one hand, he had promised that a huge program of public works would be launched to absorb the latent efforts of the unemployed.

On the other, the deficits piled up in depression years, plus the cost of the prospective public works, foreshadowed an inevitable devaluation of the franc.

If money could have been borrowed from other countries, M. Blum's dilemma might have been mollified.

But other European states have been unable to lend and the United States, with war debts defaulted, has been forbidden by law to lend to a defaulter.

* * *

If the franc were openly devalued, the action of Blum's government, especially in the light of his promise not to devalue, would have alienated the support of the thrifty French bourgeois and rentiers and fed the flames of Fascist dissent.

So M. Blum takes pattern from Fascist and other states by nationalizing the Bank of France.

In this manner his government may borrow sub rosa as much private money as it wants or thinks it wants until—well, until the inevitable!

Originally the Bank of France was limited to 10,000,000,000 francs of short-term lending, early in 1935 the limit was pushed up to 15,000,000,000 and last March to 21,000,000,000.

Even this was not enough. Now there will be no limit and, while the government's borrowing may be hidden in fudged figures, the future will tell the cost of political promises.

* * *

The same action long ago was taken in Germany, where the President of the Reichsbank is also a government functionary in the post of minister of finance, and in Italy, where the seizure of the Bank of Italy opened the way for government seizure of regional private commercial banks as well.

The American government, faced with many of the same problems, moved more smoothly; while its bonds were still bought freely by the banks, it took the precaution, in the Banking Act of 1935, to place "open-market operations of the reserve system into government-directed hands."

Today the 12 Reserve banks are told when to buy government bonds and in what quantity and the Reserve banks themselves, enjoying only minority representation on the directing committee, do not even own the government securities they buy.

That's That -:- -:- -:- -:- By Bruce Gustin

Not only American farmers but American consumers will "see red" as they study government figures showing the effects of the New Deal pig destruction program. Hog exports dropped from 14,207 in 1933 to 308 in 1935. Pork imports skyrocketed from 8000 pounds in 1933 to 3,414,000 pounds in 1935. Every housewife knows how pork prices soared during that period and that they are still skyhigh.

When as a result of normal causes, the supply of any particular food is unequal to the demand and prices go up, consumers frequently console themselves with the thought that at least the farmers of the United States are profiting. But in the case of soaring pork prices these last few years, foreign hog raisers are the ones who have reaped the lion's share of the profit. Hogs which American farmers should have sold had been slaughtered under the destruction program of the New Dealers to create a scarcity in the domestic supply of pork.

Both farmers and consumers were "skinned" by the New Dealers in this hog destruction program. The farmers were paid for killing their pigs and sows only a fraction of what they would have received if they had kept those animals and sold them in a normal way. The consumers who were taxed to pay for the hog killing program were soaked again by being forced to pay outrageous prices for pork.

American farmers can and should raise enough hogs to supply all the pork products the American people can eat. The farmers can and will do this if they are let alone and are permitted to run their own business. If we have to pay high prices for pork, let's pay for AMERICAN PORK and not for foreign pork. American voters will have an opportunity next November, when they go to the polls, to say what they think about the idiotic food destruction policy of the New Deal.

Destruction and curtailment of the nation's food supply are only one of the "skin" games worked on the American people these last few years. Don't forget the Social Security fraud. The aged indigent were led to believe that under the Social Security Act old age pensions would be increased 50 to 100 per cent, State pensions of $15 a month or less were to be doubled and those of $30 a month were to be boosted to $45. The Federal Government was going to match State pension payments dollar for dollar up to $15 a month. None of the old age pensioners is getting more than $30 a month and the average is only a trifle more than $18 a month.

Governor Johnson, Democrat, of Colorado makes the blunt charge that "Not one cent of Federal funds has been used for old age assistance in Colorado." And he proves it. He shows Colorado has received $1,748,700 of Federal money for old age pensions and on July 31, the state had $1,840,534.97 in its old age pension fund.

You may say it is the fault of the state if Federal funds for old age pensions are not used by the state to increase pension payments. But State administration of old age pensions is under Federal supervision and Federal dictation. Unless the State administers its pension system in a manner satisfactory to the Social Security board in Washington, Federal contributions will be cut off.

Under the NRA, the New Deal Administration encouraged price fixing and price boosting. Competition was stifled. Now the Department of Justice and Federal Trade Commission are investigating complaints of collusive and identical bidding on government purchasing contracts.

What the government tried to force industrial concerns to do under the NRA now is grounds for prosecution. Do you suppose a desire for revenge and a determination to get even with business and industry for opposing New Deal experimentation has anything to do with the sudden determination of the Administration to enforce Anti-Trust laws it tried to nullify?

Spain, in the throes of civil war, sees no hope in peace. Fears are entertained that which ever side wins will stage a reign of terror. Victors will exact vengeance from the vanquished.
